FACES MURDER CHARGE

Lutz Questions Prisoner, Says He Claimed Older Inmate 'Ratted' on Him.

Held in Richland county jail as the aftermath of a wild stabbing melee in a cell block corridor at Ohio State Reformatory last night, Ernest Moore, 19-year-old Kentuckian, today faced a murder charge in the killing of a fellow-inmate, Charles Dickerson, 31, wounded 13 times with one section of a pair of scissors ground into a stiletto of razor sharpness.

Prosecutor Harold T. Lutz said Moore told him he stabbed Dickerson because he felt the older inmate had "ratted" on him. The prosecutor conferred today with reformatory guards, and said he would file a murder charge against Moore this afternoon or tomorrow.

The killing was the first at the reformatory in more than six years. The last such incident which resulted fatally was the stabbing of George Davis, a colored inmate, by Calvin Reid, who was sentenced on a manslaughter charge and later was paroled.

Dickerson was stabbed 13 times, according to County Coroner L. D. McCullough, who gave a verdict of death due to multiple stab wounds. Any one of four wounds was sufficient to cause death, the coroner said.

The prosecutor gave the following account of the stabbing:

Moore and Dickerson were in separate lines as prisoners filed out of the mess hall after supper last night on their way back to the cellblocks. When the two came

Time Grows Short For 'Flag Day' Pix Of Service Men

Less than a week remains for News-Journal readers to bring or send in photographs of servicemen from Richland county, outside of Mansfield, for the big "Flag Day" edition of Sunday, June 14.

Monday, June 8, is the deadline for these photographs to arrive at The News-Journal office. Aside from the deadline, here are three big points to remember:

1—The edition will be devoted to servicemen from the county but outside of Mansfield.

2—Photographs, in order to be used, must be clear and distinct, and should be black and white, not tinted. Also, they cannot be too small.

3—The photo must be accompanied by the coupon which has appeared in The News-Journal on several occasions in the past, and will be repeated later this week.

And, if you live in the county outside of Mansfield and The News-Journal already has published a picture of your serviceman, send in the coupon with an X in the space provided for that purpose, giving the latest information on the man in uniform, and the picture will be published again.

Roosevelt O.K.'s Ration On Gasoline

Nation-Wide Limitation Expected to Start Soon After July 1.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt, it became known today, has given his approval to nation-wide gasoline rationing, expected to be put into effect soon after July 1 as a rubber conservation measure.

Information to this effect came following a conference between Mr. Roosevelt, war production board Chairman Donald M. Nelson, and Price Administrator Leon Henderson, who is administering the east coast's rationing program.

Nelson and Henderson refused to comment, however, on the purpose of their visit to the White House or the nature of the topics discussed with the chief executive.

The WPB chief reported only that the board would resume consideration at its weekly session today on the nation-wide rationing program submitted a week ago by defense transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman.

It was expected that the WPB would take final action on the program during the course of the meeting.

Nelson, Henderson, Eastman and Rubber Czar Arthur D. Newhall conferred together last week on details of the plan and reportedly ironed out administrative difficulties which stood in the way of its acceptance.

Both Nelson and Newhall have said previously, however, that the plan could not be put into operation by July 1—the date on which the Atlantic seaboard's permanent program goes into effect—because of the tremendous amount of preparatory work which has to be done, such as printing of ration cards and forms.

Unlike the eastern program,

Baker's announcement said that a shortage of paper and ink had made the action necessary.

Formation Of City Air Raid, Fire Units Moving Forward

Organization of Mansfield's air raid protection set-up moved closer to realization today with perfection of plans for an air raid warden system in each of the city's six wards and announcement of plans for training of a force of auxiliary firemen.

Glenn W. Marriott, chief air raid warden for the city, announced that 10 wardens had been appointed—at least one for each ward. They are authorized to appoint the necessary number of sector wardens in their districts.

Fire Chief C. J. Seeberger mailed out notices to 150 of the city's residents who volunteered for service as auxiliary firemen. The notices informed the volunteers of a meeting to be held at No. 1 fire station Friday at 7:30 p. m., to acquaint them with their duties.

Other residents of Mansfield interested in serving in this phase of defense also are invited to attend the meeting, regardless of whether they have volunteered for duty, Chairman G. E. Kalbfleisch of the city civilian defense council, said today.

Another development was a meeting set for this afternoon of city and county civilian defense officials, with members of the county budget commission, to discuss allocation among sub-divisions of the $18,500 in state funds

Richland Countians Hit Snag In Manpower Questionnaires

Richland county men are having trouble filling out those thousands of occupational questionnaires they are receiving from their selective service boards.

Failure of a large number of men to follow instructions for filling out the questionnaires has made it impossible to classify many of the men for war jobs, according to C. W. Handley, manager of the U. S. Employment service in Mansfield.

Although the questionnaires are returned to draft boards, one copy goes to the Employment service for use in placing men in necessary war jobs. The draft boards need the information to help them decide whether deferment is necessary in some cases. Free help in filling out the blanks is available at employment offices.

Handley said a few of the questionnaires have been returned to the registrants for correction and more information.

"The more detail the questionnaires contain the easier it is to place the registrant in the proper classification and on the job where he can do the most good," Handley said.

He pointed out that registrants should list all the experience they have had in any jobs they have held in the past as well as their present jobs.

Many jobs are listed on the questionnaires, but the registrant need mark only those with which he has had some experience, Handley added.

House Leaders Ready to Give Up New Oil Delivery Plan.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— In the face of unexpected opposition, the house leadership today had virtually abandoned legislation for construction of an oil pipeline and a barge canal across Florida as a means of transporting oil and gasoline to the eastern seaboard.

Majority Leader McCormack (D.-Mass.) and Chairman Mansfield (D.-Texas) of the rivers and harbors committee, said they had no present intention of pressing for further consideration of the bill, which the house rejected yesterday 121 to 85.

As far as he was concerned, Mansfield said, "the bill is dead" because "a majority of the members have indicated they don't want it."

Charges All Are Hitler Instruments

Special Message Names Bulgaria, Hungary and Rumania.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt today asked congress to declare war on Bulgaria, Hungary and Rumania.

In a special message to congress, he pointed out that the three nations had declared war against this country, "not upon their own initiative or in response to the wishes of their own peoples, but as the instruments of Hitler.

But, he added, the three countries "are now engaged in military activities directed against the United Nations and are planning an extension of these activities."

The text of the president's brief message:

"The governments of Bulgaria, Hungary and Rumania have declared war against the United States. I realize that the three governments took this action not upon their own initiative or in response to the wishes of their own peoples but as the instruments of Hitler. These three governments are now engaged in military activities directed against the United Nations and are planning an extension of these activities.

"Therefore, I recommend that the congress recognize a state of war between the United States and Bulgaria, between the United States and Hungary, and between the United States and Rumania."

Although the senate was not in session today, the message was sent to Capitol Hill where it was read in the house.

When congress grants the president's request, the United States will be formally at war with six countries, the other three being Japan, Germany and Italy.

The declaration of war against Japan was enacted in record time by congress on Dec. 8. The

Flusher 16 Years Old, City Wants To Insure It Now

Although street employes consider Mansfield's 16-year-old street flusher obsolete and use it only on rare occasions, city council will be asked tonight to authorize the purchase of fire, theft and other insurance on the antiquated vehicle.

The flusher has been operated by the city off and on for 16 years but this is the first time that any administration had requested insurance on the equipment. During those 16 years, the flusher has never been stolen nor has it caught fire, according to city record.

Leslie K. Wagner, city solicitor, said that he had been asked to draw up the legislation for the insurance in a message from the office of Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff.

Wolff, when contacted, said the matter had been handled by the mayor's secretary in line with a "general insurance" policy set up recently. The director said

Mayor and Director Meet With Manager—There's Still No Program.

Mansfield's municipal airport, badly in need of a "shot in the arm," and promised that four months ago when city council appropriated $5,000 for its improvement was still needing the "shot" today.

Since the appropriation of the $5,000 less than $200 has been "dribbled" out for minor grading work at the airport. Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff said today that no general improvement was planned and that "two or three men would be sent out to work at the port from time to time."

Director Wolff and the mayor, however, visited the airport last night to confer with James R. Harrington, airport manager, and Harrington made several recommendations for the immediate use of the funds for needed improvements.

Harrington outlined the immediate need for filling in large holes in the runways which endanger military planes landing at the port. The manager also called attention to the necessity of marking the runways, lengthening the runways and repairing the drainage system.

Harrington said that traffic at the field had become so heavy that it was necessary to use Civilian Air Patrol members to police

Germans Begin Mass Migration From Rhineland

Site of Giant Krupp Armament Works Hammered In Second Gigantic Raid; Toll of Wounded Set At 54,000 In Saturday Night Attack.

(By Associated Press)

Another destructive assault fell upon the heart of Germany's war foundries before dawn today when nearly 1,000 RAF bombers smashed at the city of Essen, site of the giant Krupp armament works, even as the Germans were reported fleeing in a mass migration from the Rhineland.

Altogether, Prime Minister Winston Churchill announced, a total of 1,036 British planes thundered over the reich on missions of ruin during the night.

Churchill promised, too, that raids of even greater severity would develop "when we are joined, as we soon shall be, by the air force of the United States."

It was the second titanic blow at Adolf Hitler's military strength in 48 hours, capping Saturday night's 1,250-plane attack on Cologne, 35 miles southwest of Essen, in which private advices to the New York Times declared about 20,000 Germans were killed and 54,000 wounded.

The times dispatch said three-fifths of Cologne's 800,000 inhabitants were being officially evacuated, chiefly to Munich, and that the entire populations of Aachen, Dusseldorf, Wuppertal, Mainz and other Rhineland cities were fleeing to safer zones.

London quarters indicated the RAF planes manned by 6,000 fliers probably rained about 6,000,000 pounds of incendiaries and high-explosive bombs in the attack on Essen, key rail center on a main line to Berlin.

Thirty-five RAF planes were acknowledged missing, nine fewer than Saturday night's loss of 44. This was still far below the 10 per cent danger-zone for losses.

The German high command said night fighters and anti-aircraft fire shot down 37 RAF planes over Duisberg and Oberhausen, in the Essen region, and described the British raids as "terror attacks directed solely against the civilian population."

The Nazi command said 59 British planes were destroyed in daylight Monday and last night.

A British air ministry communique said giant four-motored Stirlings, Lancasters and Halifaxes, some of them able to carry four tons of bombs each, "pressed home the attack most effectively."

Great fires were reported engulfing Essen as the last of the raiders turned back.

Churchill said most of the 1,036 RAF planes turned loose over Germany during the night engaged in the raid on Essen, and to a cheering parliament he announced that other German cities would be subjected to "an ordeal the like of which has never been experienced in any country in continuity, severity or magnitude."

He cautioned the British, how-

DARE: Curtin Challenges Japs To Try Invasion Of Australia

(By Associated Press)

Australia's Prime Minister John Curtin bluntly challenged Japan to attempt an invasion of the down-under continent today and declared that since the arrival of American reinforcements "the enemy has found his most southerly adventure beyond his capacity to execute.

On the critical war front, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's Chinese armies were reported to have recaptured Shakichen, north of the Japanese-held Chekiang province capital of Kinhwa, and killed 400 Japanese troops in a surprise attack.

A Chinese army spokesman acknowledged, however, that Japanese troops had driven 35 miles southwest from Kinhwa in the east coast fighting and advanced within 10 miles of Chuhsien, one of the main targets of Japanese raids against suspected Allied air base sites.

Confused fighting spread through several of China's eastern provinces, with the invaders operating on a big scale in an apparent all-out attempt to crush Gen. Chang's armies and end the long and exhausting war on that front.

In Australia, Prime Minister Curtin launched the commonwealth's second liberty loan drive with the declaration that "Japan's program at last has suffered a stalemate," and he added:

"I defy the enemy to land large forces in Australia."

Coincidentally, Gen. Douglas

SHELLED: Rommel's Forces Hit From Land, Air In Desert Trap

(By International News Service)

BRITISH BATTLE HEADQUARTERS IN THE LIBYAN DESERT—Mechanized forces of German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel were under continuous artillery and air bombardment today as they battled fiercely to extricate themselves from the trap of British minefields between El Gazala and Bir Hacheim.

Nazi commanders were racing against time in an effort to remove their Afrika Corps units through two gaps in the mined area before imperial forces completely closed the avenues of escape.

Marshal Rommel was reported to have lost 50 per cent of his tanks along the 60-mile front between El Gazala on the Mediterranean coast and the inland oasis of Bir Hacheim in his futile attempt to push eastward and take the imperial fortress of Tobruk.

The battle of the gaps appeared to be entering its final stage as British tanks, planes and artillery smashed at the Axis mechanized columns striving to retrace their steps to the west and regain their original positions.

(A Reuter's correspondent in Libya stated that "it is now clear that the (British) eighth army ever, not to expect all future raids to be "above the four-figure scale" in number of planes adding that "methods of attack will be continually varied according to circumstances."

Hardly before the last of the night bombers had rolled down on their home bases, the day shift of Britain's stepped-up offensive was in the clear air early today, streaking for the French coast.

Just as the Germans sought to repay for the desolation of Cologne with a retaliatory attack Sunday night on the ancient cathedral city of Canterbury, they announced today that another old-world English town, Ipswich, had been the target of their night air blows.

United States observers were believed to have gone over again with the RAF.

They were preparing, presumably, for what Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the United States army air force, yesterday called the hope of American fliers "very soon to fly and fight beside the RAF" in attacks which the Germans "cannot meet, defeat or survive."

(The German radio said British planes attacked western and northwestern Germany and that more than a score of bombers were reported shot down.)

The air ministry's disclosure that aircraft of the bomber, fighter, coastal and army cooperation commands attacked enemy bases in Germany, France and the low countries to guard the route of the Essen raiders indicated that the night's operations may have been of a magnitude possibly equalling the startling strength of the Cologne assault.

The nine losses were fewer than the 44 of Saturday night—still far below the 10 per cent losses which military authorities generally agree can be afforded by a successful air smash.

On a basis of comparison with the Cologne attack, Essen probably was deluged under 6,000,000 pounds of incendiary and explosive bombs poured down from planes manned by 6,000 fliers.

While the thousand bombers were hauling their deadly freight to the Ruhr, one of the largest "intruder" forces of the war—composed of American-made Boston and Hurricane fighter bombers—went hunting over the intervening occupied territory as they did on the night of the operations against Cologne.

Drawing to themselves the attention of the German anti-aircraft gunners, these forces bombed several airfields to blank out the night fighter defense, and attacked shipping and railroads in Holland, Belgium and France.

One Dornier bomber was reported shot down over Holland and several other German planes damaged.

The air ministry news service announced that Spitfires and bomb-carrying Hurricanes made a large-scale sweep over the Gravelines and Hardelote area in northern France this morning, shooting down one Fock Wolff 190 and damaging several others.

One Spitfire section drove off a force of German planes which outnumbered them four to one, the news service said, while another section, tired of looking in vain for an air fight, dropped to Ground Leve to shoot up gunposts and German troops.

Reds Claim 3,000 Nazis Slain by Bombs

MOSCOW — (INS) — A single Russian dive bomber squadron operating on the Kharkov front destroyed a German divisional headquarters and killed more than 3,000 German soldiers during the past two weeks, the newspaper Pravda declared today. The squadron also knocked out more than 100 Nazi tanks, the report stated.

Soviet anti-tank planes have destroyed 42 enemy tanks on the Bryansk front in the past few days, according to a frontline dispatch.

Reports from Sevastopol said the Black sea fleet of the Red navy had shot down 16 German planes in a two day battle.

An official communique issued just after midnight said nothing of importance had developed on the front during the previous 24 hours. During the week ended May 30, the communique said, 432 German planes had been destroyed and Russian losses were only 134 planes.

Claim RAF Loses 59 Planes in Raids

BERLIN, (From German Broadcasts—(AP)—British bombers attacked several localities in western Germany, including Duisberg and Oberhausen, last night and 59 were shot down during the day and night, the German high command said today.

The raids were said to be centered on "residential quarters."

(Duisberg, Oberhausen and Essen—which the British said was the main target last night—form a tight triangle of cities in the industrial Rhineland.)

The German air force was said to have raided Ipswich, a port in south England, and to have repeated an attack on Canterbury with heavy-caliber bombs.

The 59 British planes included losses Monday and last night.

The communique called the RAF raids "terror attacks directed solely against the civilian population."

Night fighters and anti-aircraft were credited with downing 37 British planes over Duisberg and Oberhausen, and naval artillery was said to have bagged three more.

Press Speculates On Air Attacks

LONDON —(INS)— The British press today devoted much editorial space to speculation on whether air raids alone could knock Germany out of the war.

Such an impression would be a "highly dangerous form of complacency, but nobody can assert that air attacks on this scale are not likely to cripple the German war machine and bring nearer the day of victory," said the Daily Telegraph.

The war will not be won so long as the German army remains in being and is capable of action, said the Daily Mail.

The News Chronicle said the Luftwaffe still is immensely formidable and "only its preoccupation with the eastern (Russian) front is saving us these nights from the full fury of its attacks."

he had no other information on the matter. He added that he didn't "think the old thing was worth insuring."

Charles H. Hebel, city streets superintendent, said today that the flusher was scarcely ever used and then only on a few downtown street.

"The flusher is obsolete just like the fire-fighting equipment of the city," said Hebel. "We use it occasionally but not very often."

The street superintendent said that the flusher had an original pressure of about 72 pounds but that the street employes were lucky to get 30 pounds at present.

At least one councilman, George C. Kyle, said today that he didn't "understand why the city should begin insuring a 16-year-old flusher it never bothered about before."

The application for insuring the flusher is included along with others for a motorcycle for the traffic department and some compressing machinery of the street and water departments.

CURTIN DARES JAPS TO INVADE

MacArthur's headquarters announced that the wrecks of three Japanese midget submarines destroyed in an unsuccessful attempt to attack Sydney harbor on Sunday had been located. Smashed by depth charges and artillery fire, two of the sunken hulks had already been recovered.

Allied forces pressed the hunt for a mother ship which was believed to have launched the short-range submarines on their suicide mission within 300 miles or less from Australia's major city.

United Nations fliers continued blasting at Japanese "invasion" bases north of Australia, carrying out three night raids without loss of a plane and destroying or damaging nine of 30 Japanese planes which raided Port Moresby, New Guinea.

On the night raids, Allied airmen bombed and machine-gunned the enemy at Lae and Salamaua, in New Guinea, and at Rabaul, New Britain.

Japan's thrusts against eastern China included a heavy new offensive in Kwangtung province, where a Tokyo broadcast reported that Japanese troops had captured Tsungfa, 50 miles northeast of Canton, and swept on several miles north.

The drive was launched from the Canton area Sunday, with three Japanese columns striking through Chinese mountain defenses.

The Tokyo radio also reported that Japanese bluejackets had captured Yuhwan, capital of Chinese Yuhwan island, 38 miles east of Wenchow in Chekiang province.

Far to the west, at China's back door, fierce new fighting broke out in Yunnan province around Lungling and Tengchung as Japanese reinforcements went into action from across the Burma frontier.

RAF bombers continued to pound Japanese airdromes, troop columns and river shipping behind the lines in enemy-held Buma.

AN ADVANCED ALLIED BASE, Australia —(AP)— Lieut. John C. O'Donnell, 22-year-old bomber pilot from Oakland, Md., was suspicious of his left engine on a recent mission over Lae, New Guinea, but it has his OK now.

Japanese Zero fighters jumped O'Donnell's twin-engined plane and its flying mates over the target, starting a running air battle which lasted 35 minutes.

The right engine was machine-gunned into silence, but the suspected left one kept the bomber in the air while its two gunners shot down four Zeros.

Then it pulled the plane home safely despite hits in the tail and other places. Never before has a bomber of this type been known to fly so long on one engine.

which has been apportioned to the county.

Auxiliary fire training will be started at once at the four fire stations in the city, with the volunteers assigned to the station closest their homes. In addition, first aid classes also will be started at once for those who have not yet received this training.

Instruction of auxiliary policemen has been going on for some weeks, under direction of Police Captain Jesse Schwab. More than 75 have received this training, and an additional class of similar size will be started shortly.

The 10 ward wardens, who assembled at the Legion home last night for a meeting to complete their organization, have completed their first aid training, and most have finished training in decontamination and demolition work as well. They are:

First ward—Ralph Hughes and John Massa; Second—Clarence Shill and Earl Saltzgaber; Third—W. E. Bradford and L. C. Bergstrom; Fourth—H. F. Brinkman and J. Wolfgang; Fifth—J. A. McDermid; Sixth—Paul Pickering.

The city has been divided into 175 air raid sectors, formed by splitting precincts into two, three or four units. The ward wardens, at the meeting last night, were delegated the responsibility of appointing four wardens for each of the sectors in their respective wards. The ward heads also will select an air raid post in each sector.

Later these 175 sector posts will be linked with a central "air raid nerve center" by a communication system permitting prompt contact between all points.

Kalbfleisch spoke at last night's meeting and outlined plans for the city's representation at a warden school to be conducted at Columbus June 15 to 20.

abreast, Moore began talking with Dickerson, trying to get him to fight.

Moore suddenly drew his weapon and plunged it into Dickerson's shoulder. (Moore claimed Dickerson reached into his pocket as if to draw a weapon, but later examination showed Dickerson to be unarmed.)

The wounded man ran, shouting for help, down the long corridor before the cellblock, known as the range. Moore pursued him, and close on his heels came Guard George S. Ewing, who came running from his station some 50 feet away when the altercation started.

Ignoring Ewing's commands to halt, Moore gained on Dickerson and plunged his weapon into the man's back as he ran. Dickerson finaly fell, and Moore, after stabbing him several more times, fled up the stairs toward the reformatory "bull pen."

Cornered by Guards Ewing and Harold Fleming at the locked door to the bullpen, Moore refused to give up the weapon. Usihg their maces, they forcibly disarmed him and captured him.

The guards found Moore was equipped with a weapon fashioned from one blade of a regulation pair of scissors which he said he smuggled from the institution's tailor shop, where he worked. He told Lutz he carried it from the cell under his shirt.

The weapon was eight inches long over all, with a blade four and a half inches long. Lutz said Moore apparently had worked on the blade for some time, grinding it to a keen sharp edge. The other blade of the scissors, also sharpened, later was found in Moore's cell.

Dickerson was pronounced dead on arrival at the reformatory hospital.

Twelve times before Moore has violated reformatory regulations in the two years since he was admitted from Tiffin, Seneca county, to serve a "one-to-age" sentence for auto theft and carrying concealed weapons, institution records showed.

A native of Corbin, Ky., Moore was 17 when he was admitted and he was listed on reformatory records as a juvenile delinquent. The one-to-age sentence means that he was to serve from one year to the time of reaching 21.

One of his previous offenses, the cutting of a fellow-inmate with a small ripping-knife used in the reformatory tailor shop, added a full year to Moore's sentence. On that occasion, however, the wound inflicted was little more than a scratch.

After trying unsuccessfully to reach her by telephone last night, Superintendent Arthur L. Glattke of the Reformatory today sent word by telegram to Dickerson's mother, Mrs. Ethel Middaugh, of Junction City, O., R. D. 2.

Dickerson was received at the Reformatory May 1, 1934, from Newark, Licking county, to serve one to 20 years for cutting with intent to wound.

Moore blamed his previous brushes with reformatory authorities on Dickerson, charging that the latter had "ratted" on him to guards. (This is prison parlance for an inmate acting as informer against another.)

Investigation showed Moore's charge was entirely unfounded, Lutz said. The charges brought against him heretofore were filed by five different guards, and none of the accusations was based on information from Dickerson, according to Lutz.

the runways to handle traffic. The airport manager said that some of the lighter planes could land on the short runways even though there was a need for repair but that a longer and better runway was needed for the military planes which have a much higher landing speed.

Traffic at the airport is increasing every day. Edwin James, traffic manager, reported that in the first five months of 1942, more than 6,300 planes had landed and took off from the airport, an increase of approximately 1,300 over the same period last year when only 10,000 landings and take-offs were made for the entire year.

James also said that military planes of greater weight and speed were stopping at the port and that the bad condition of the field made such stops hazardous.

Despite Harrington's request for immediate action, Wolff said today that no immediate program had been planned. The director said that most of the work to be done would consist of repairing tile drains and in grading rough spots on the field. No work has been done on the drainage system in eight years.

Harrington said the runway markers were needed because the runways could not be seen from the air due to tall grass and the bad condition of the field. Wooden lathes would be placed along the edge of the runways to guide fliers.

Although the $5,000 has been on hand since the first week in February, less than $200 was spent for work at the airport. Laborers worked for nearly three weeks doing grading work on the north side of the field.

The program for improving the airport was set up when C. M. Crafton was service director and the appropriating ordinance placed all authority in directing the program in the service director's hands. Since Crafton left office after the mayor insisted the director had "resigned," little work has been done in carrying out the proposed program.

Although Director Wolff has full control of the program to improve the airport, the mayor went along on last night's conference. Wolff, however, would be the only official authorized to carry out the airport program.

instituted as a result of an acute shortage of petroleum, nation-wide rationing will be designed solely to conserve automobile tires by eliminating all non-essential driving. The amount of gasoline to be rationed to motorists will be determined on what mileage officials deem to be essential.

The Brookings institution, which said that 20,000,000 automobiles had to be kept in operation to prevent collapse of the civilian economy, suggested reducing the national driving average from 9,000 miles to 6,000 miles per vehicle annually.

It was pointed out, however, that whatever basic figure is selected, some motorists probably will be driving more and others less, depending upon the definition of essential use of passenger cars.

Newhall has repeatedly warned that there will be no rubber available for civilian uses in the next two years and that the existing supply of tires—the nation's greatest stockpile of rubber—must be preserved in order to assure maintenance of essential transportation.

Greyhound Buses Go On

NEW WARTIME SCHEDULES

The transportation needs of America-at-war have made it necessary to change Greyhound schedules beginning tomorrow. This new service has been arranged in full cooperation with the Office of Defense Transportation.

Today the important thing is to make every bus work full time—keeping vital traffic on the move. To achieve this purpose, Greyhound is introducing many changes—diverting buses to more essential routes—reducing driving speeds—eliminating Expresses and Limiteds and many "second sections"—unifying service with other bus companies in some cases—conserving tires and vital materials in every way.

Be sure to ask about the new schedules before you take a trip. We hope you will not be inconvenienced, crowded or delayed. But if you are, please be lenient—the war effort comes first with Greyhound as it does with you.

THE WAR TODAY

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
(Wide World War Analyst).

Small wonder that Hitler's chancellery is said to be swept with consternation at the attempted assassination of Reinhard Heydrich, deputy chief of the dread German Gestapo (secret police), in Czechoslovakia.

It would be difficult to exaggerate the significance of this event, for it emphasizes the burning spirit of that invisible front of conquered peoples who are only waiting for their chance to turn and rend their oppressors.

The great daring of this effort to exterminate powerful "Der Henker" (the hangman) gives a measure of the determination of the wearers of the Nazi yoke.

This defiance of an organization upon which the Fuehrer has depended so greatly to keep a tight rein both abroad and at home is reported to have resulted in arrests even in Berlin. Any weakening of the authority of the Gestapo obviously creates a danger to Nazidom. From Hitler's standpoint there is an unfortunate coincidence in the unprecedented British air raids.

Since these will give a mighty fillip to the fighting spirit of the occupied countries and already are reported to have caused a panicky state of nerves in Germany's Cologne and Essen territories.

It is an evil omen for Hitler that now the subjugated are rising even against Der Henker and the Gestapo, which has such unlimited powers for reprisal. The invisible front is on the move.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

I SHOULD like to mention, without further comment, the fact that George Abbott, while rehearsing cast additions to "Best Foot Forward," is wearing a peaked blue cap closely resembling those worn by trotting race drivers in the Hambletonian Stakes . . .

Kilgallen

These nights on Broadway I keep thinking that if Joe Cook hadn't been retired by his physicians, what a fine addition he'd make to the current revival of vaudeville, he and his gift for wonderful nonsense . . . Sometimes I wonder when Rita Hayworth gets time to: (a) sleep; (b) make pictures. She poses for so many glamorshots destined for the rotogravures, color pages, drama sections, picture magazines and fan literature; she tours so many army camps, naval bases, and canteens; sells so many stamps and bonds; and cheers so many members of the RAF, RCAF, USA, USN and USMC, that I am amazed she has time to get her hair done and have her sweaters fitted, let alone learning dialogue for the cameras and resting her cheek on a downy puff. S'wonderful.

Wait till you hear Irving Berlin's score for "This Is the Army." Eight of them are so wonderful you don't know which one you like best, but my ears are very fond of a ditty called "I Lost My Heart at the Stage Door Canteen" . . . Someone wrote the other day that George S. Kaufman was "closeted" at his Bucks county farm while writing a Warner Bros. scenario. Closeted—in 12 acres? . . . I often wonder what hockey players do in the summer time . . . I suppose you've seen those signs in all the store windows, reading, "Illumination Is Required To Be Extinguished Before These Premises Are Closed For Business." Am I wrong, or does that sound like a translation, and am I right when I say that the fellow has never met a copyreader? What's the matter with "Turn Off the Lights?" If this trend of expression becomes a vogue we may expect "It Is Requested That You Be So Kind As To Refrain From Encroaching On The Herbiage" for "Keep Off The Grass;" and in cafeterias, "Be Attentive To Your Headgear and Outer Garment" for "Watch Your Hat and Coat."

After all the excitement in congress about Mayris Chaney, it was quite a shock to me to see her backstage at Loew's State and note that far from having a semi-diabolical aspect, she was a gentle, pretty, blond young woman who dances agreeably and breathes no fire at all.

In fact, it was quite a letdown to find her of such unsinister mien. The only thing about her that amazes me now is how she was able to catch up with the First Lady often enough to become so friendly with her . . . Have you seen Tommy Dorsey's white cashmere suit? It's as fluffy and soft as a bunny's ear, and he looks like a milk bottle in it . . . Lem Ward sounds so much like the name of a cracker-barrel philosopher in a tiny Maine town, it seems an odd tag for the urbane director of "Uncle Harry" . . . And speaking of "Uncle Harry," I would like to ask the manager of the Broadhurst if he would be so good as to step down the aisle some evening and sit in seat F112. The view of the stage is fine, but it is the strangest seat, from the standpoint of upholstery that I have ever encountered, being fashioned, I think, to fit the anatomy of someone designed by a cubist. I'm not complaining, in fact, I'm only kidding—but go and sit in it, Mr. Mgr!

Remember the old-fashioned neighborhood ice cream parlor? Usually called the Varsity Sweet Shoppee or the Sugar Bowl, it was the meeting spot for youngsters a decade or so ago before they took up with roadhouses that had juke boxes.

And I shouldn't be surprised if that transportation shortage brings a revival of these by-gone places, so enchanting with their gleaming rows of tile tables, their glass counters packed with jelly beans and chocolate creams and pink and yellow bonbons. It was a place for courting and for trysts, and now that I think of it, I miss it. As soon as the news is brought to me of the revival of soda shop society, I'll be happy to go down and throw out the first double-frosted chocolate malted with whipped cream!

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Jacob B. Taylor, Ohio liquor director, reported today that "people are not buying more liquor, but more people are buying liquor."

He said gallonage sales for the period from Jan. 1 to May 16 were 3,607,333, a gain of 489,014 gallons over the same 1941 period. Taylor said more—money made available by wartime employment resulted in greater liquor sales.

ITALY'S WOMEN FIND LOT HARD DURING WARTIME

Told to Keep Attractive, They Use Extreme Fashions To Make Up For Quality.

(The lot of women in wartime Italy is a hard one, United Press correspondent Eleanor Packard, who returned aboard the Swedish liner Drottningholm, reports in the following dispatch.)

By ELEANOR PACKARD
(UP Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK—Though German women have resigned themselves to Nazi-imposed dowdiness for the duration of the war, women in Italy are encouraged to keep themselves attractive to menfolk—though the means at their disposal are extremely limited.

It is part of the Fascist 'more babies' campaign, designed to bolster the birth rate, which has inevitably declined despite 29 to 30 year sentences for the practice of birth control.

One of the strangest government regulations is the special rationing dispensation for newlyweds. They are allowed extra points for clothes and household linen, with a specific allowance of six sheets for a double bed—sheets for twin beds are not permitted.

Premier Benito Mussolini recently issued a decree forbidding the wives, sisters and mothers of dead soldiers to wear mourning. This not only keeps the Italian people from realizing the extent of casualties—a grief-stricken heart is not readily apparent beneath a gaily flowered dress—but it is part of the whole trend of Italian fashions, in which the Fascist government struggles for the maximum of chic with a minimum of materials.

Skirts are shorter and skimpier, hats tinier and more cockeyed then they have ever been. As the war progresses Italian women are going in more and more for extremes. That is, except for slacks. They are strictly forbidden.

Lipstick of bad quality is plentiful.

One of the tricks to evade rationing, of moneyed women, is to buy the ration cards of the poor.

LESS NOISE!

Landis Calls For Quiet as Aid to War Effort.

NEW YORK —(AP)— The bombs and guns may be thundering on the world's battlefronts, but here at home it's national noise abatement week and civilian Defense Director James N. Landis wants Americans to observe it seriously.

In a letter to Director Samuel L. Hooper of the national noise abatement council endorsing the council's program, Landis wrote today

"Aside from the physical and psychological effects of noise there is the timely, practical consideration that reduction of noise makes possible more ready attention to the sound of the air raid alarm."

YOUTH ADMITS KILLING BABY

Authorities Say Boy, 16, Took Two-Months-Old Infant From Automobile.

(By International News Service)

MARQUETTE, Mich.—Authorities today held 16-year-old Ross Heath of Chicago who, they asserted, confessed the kidnaping and killing of a two-months-old baby girl whose parents had left her sleeping for a few minutes in an automobile outside a tavern.

Sgt. Charles W. Engle of the state police said the youth's confession was "incoherent" in spots and that he was not satisfied with the story.

The nude body of the infant, Gloria Jean Nault, was found in the cab of a truck a quarter of a mile from the tavern.

Sgt. Engle said that while the child's fractured skull and the bruises on its body could have been suffered in a fall such as Heath described, the youth was unable to explain the removal of the infant's clothing.

Soon after the infant's body was found, police found deep heel imprints leading from the Nault automobile to the truck cab where the body had been left.

This led to the capture of Heath, as it was recalled that since his arrival in the community he had affected a cowboy costume with high-heeled boots.

Governor of the Bahamas, the Duke left by plane a little more than 12 hours after he arrived in the capital with the Duchess for a week's stay.

The only explanation given by British officials was "urgent business." It was understood that the Duchess did not accompany the Duke.

British officials assumed that after a quick trip to Nassau the Duke would return to Washington.

DISCORD RUMBLES THROUGH UMW AS SEVEN LOCAL UNIONS QUIT

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND—New rumblings of discord within John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers of America (CIO), District 50, were evident today with the resignation of seven local unions which charged Lewis with "operating a dictatorial machine against the interests and demands of the membership."

Some 64 shop stewards and officers of the UMW locals, it was reported by Wendell Ringholtz and Edward S. Voyson, met last night to express full support to CIO President Philip Murray in his fight with Lewis. The two have clashed repeatedly over support of President Roosevelt's policies.

Ringholtz and Voyson, in announcing the results of the meeting, said they were former UMW representatives who had been "purged" for not conforming to the Lewis' line. The seven seceding locals have an approximate membership of 1,300 in 14 plants.

As representatives of the seceding union, Ringholtz and Voyson will go to Washington today to request that Murray and the executive board of the CIO form a new international union for workers in the gas, coke, chemical and cosmetic locals which form district TP.

A resolution passed by the locals charged "this powerful Lewis machine is throwing its enormous strength into its efforts to wreck American democracy through aid to Hitler's appeasement agents in their plot to create labor and national disunity."

Ringholtz said similar action against Lewis by local unions is being taken in Buffalo; Newark, N. J.; Midland, Mich.; and New York.

"That Cologne was a beautiful spot," says Mansfield school member W. C. Mead, "and it seems a shame to blow it up, but I'm glad the R. A. F. did it." Mead was in the Rainbow Division in the Army of Occupation at nearby Coblentz immediately after the last war. "Cologne was out-of-bounds for us," Mead explains, "and the only way we could get there was to pull a sneak, because we couldn't get passes. I got there once for four hours without getting caught, but I couldn't tear up the town as badly as the R.A.F. did because I had to spend all my time dodging M.P.'s."

HIGH COURT ORDERS NEW ARGUMENTS

Fails to Reach Decision on 49-Cent Wheat Penalty; Farm Use Questioned.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The supreme court's action in ordering reargument of the 49-cent wheat penalty case today cast a cloud over constitutionality of some of the legislation enacted to control production of farm products.

The high court, which will adjourn for the summer next Monday, found itself unable to reach a decision in the case. Secretary of Agriculture Wickard appealed after a lower court enjoined collection of a penalty of 49-cents a bushel on marketing over-quota wheat

In ordering reargument next Oct. 12, the court limited it to the question of restrictions in the AAA act of 1938 on use of wheat on the farm.

While the high court in several cases has ruled that the federal government has extensive power to control movement of farm products in interstate commerce, foes of the act contend that the AAA act goes down to controlling use of a product by the farmer on his own farm.

And since it is estimated that 31 per cent of all wheat produced never leaves the farm—but is used for seed and feed for livestock—the court's decision may affect the entire crop control scheme.

Many other crops, especially corn, also are largely used on the farm. Should the high court rule that congress cannot regulate what a farmer does with what he raises on his farm, AAA experts say, it may be difficult to effectively control production.

A group of 17 lawyers, headed by former Rep. William Lemke, of North Dakota, thrust before the high court a brief in the case in which this phase was emphasized.

"If this law is constitutional, then congress can prohibit any farmer from raising any wheat and using it for his own family and his own livestock. Absurd as this may seem, that is exactly what the department of agriculture is attempting to do under these acts," the lawyers said.

The lawyers said that heretofore the court, in upholding regulatory acts, has pointed out that they do not go down to controlling production but only marketing.

Friends Pay Last Tribute Today To John Barrymore

HOLLYWOOD —(U.P.)— Friends of the late John Barrymore, from Greta Garbo to the makeup men, gathered today for their last farewells.

The Rev. John O'Donnell planned the simplest possible ceremony in the Cavalry Cemetery chapel where Barrymore's body rested in a silver plated casket, ready for interment in a nearby crypt.

There was room in the concrete chapel for only 70 guests whom the 60-year-old Barrymore had numbered among his intimates. Their names make up a roll call of Hollywood's great—and a cross section of its unknowns.

For active pallbearers there was John Decker, the eccentric artist; Gene Fowler, the old-time newspaper reporter; W. C. Fields, the comedian and one of Barrymore's drinking companions; E. J. Mannix, the movie producer, and C. J. Brider and Stanley Campbell, the make-up men who always managed to make Barrymore look handsome no matter how low he felt.

Only one of Barrymore's four ex-wives was expected, Elaine Barrie, who divorced him last year.

THREE SURVIVE SHIP SINKING

Spend Seven Days on Raft With Bodies Encrusted With Oil.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The navy department announced today that a medium sized British merchant vessel has been torpedoed in the Atlantic and survivors have been landed at an east coast port.

The three survivors were listed at Bos'n Rolf Helland, of Philadelphia, John G. Traubel, a wiper of Gibbsboro, N. J., and Joseph Shackelford, of Severen, Va.

Helland and Traubel, their bodies encrusted with heavy fuel oil, drifted on a raft for seven days before they were finally rescued and brought to a gulf port. When rescued, both men were unconscious.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, JUNE 2, 1942.

Back in Civil war days, as revealed by photographs, there was no razor blade problem.

An information service is asked "what comes after a trillion dollars?"—but the tax collectors will know, when the time comes.

There's too much optimism in this country today, someone tells you. There's too much pessimism, comments another—and maybe they're both right.

USO Deserves Your Support

WORK being done by the United Service Organizations, familiarly known as the USO, has been so widely heralded and is such an essential part of civilian participation in the national war effort, that no more seems needed than a reminder that the campaign to raise $22,000 in Richland county for the USO starts today and continues through two weeks.

Mansfield and Richland county service men, back on furlough, or in their letters, have told relatives and friends of the fine service being performed by the USO and of the social and recreational facilities provided at camps and for men in all branches of the service, during off-duty hours that might otherwise be spent in loneliness or unwholesome environment.

Hundreds of Mansfield and Richland county men and women make up the organization of enthusiastic workers which will conduct the canvass for contributions to this fund. A quick and liberal response is anticipated from thousands of residents of this city and county, many of whom have sons in the service, while others have relatives or friends who are benefiting from work of the USO, and who will wish to support this activity.

It announced that of the $22,000 quota for this county, $20,000 will go toward the national fund of $32,000,000 while $2,000 will be retained locally to provide club room facilities for service men at home on leave.

Reduced Traffic Death Toll

SUBSTANTIAL reduction of traffic death toll over the Memorial day week-end, with several hundred fewer fatalities than "normal" in recent years, provides basis for interesting speculation as to ways of further reducing motor car accidents, even when highways are more crowded than they were over this holiday period.

It is not heavy traffic, in itself, that makes more accidents, This is evidenced by the fact that few serious accidents occur on roads where there are long processions of cars moving in both directions, making it necessary for all drivers to keep in line and travel at moderate speed.

Speed, recklessness or intoxication are contributing causes in practically all traffic fatalities, and a number of factors have combined to reduce the first two of these—principal among which has been emphasis on conserving tires and gasoline.

Far from feeling satisfied with the record of fewer traffic deaths during the Memorial day week-end, present temporary reduction of the number of cars on streets and highways might well be made a period of intensified education and enforcement—primarily for the purpose of saving lives, but also with a view to conserving automobiles, tires and gasoline to the greatest possible extent.

Letter and Clipping From England

A MANSFIELD soldier, now in England, enclosed a clipping from the London Daily Telegraph in a letter just received by his mother.

The letter included reference to the fine treatment American soldiers were being accorded by the English people, and of the way in which they were being received into homes.

The clipping was of a letter in which a reader suggested interchange of letters between Britons and Americans, so that bonds of friendship could be established and a more complete understanding reached.

"We are fighting for a common cause," the writer says, "each certain of the other's loyalty and whole-hearted cooperation, and yet we are comparative strangers to one another."

A suggestion is: "If the people of Britain would write to friends in America, telling them how we are facing up to things and how often we notice 'Made in U. S. A.' on the food and materials we so urgently need to carry on, I feel sure they would be heartened. If we ask them, in turn, to let us know how they are getting on and for their frank comments on the war and ourselves, it would be helpful to us . . .

"If we do this friendships will strengthen, faith will increase, and determination to endure will never fail, until the sacrifices of both nations are crowned with the laurels of victory."

An article by Carter Field, elsewhere on this page, tells of the serious proportions of anti-British propaganda being spread in the United States and innocently believed by some people.

The idea of an interchange of letters, and better understanding of the sacrifices and war efforts which people on the British Isles have been making during the past several years, is a good one, as the common purposes of both nations cannot be doubted—and friendship will strengthen the means of accomplishing these purposes.

Health Commissioner's Complaint

COMPLAINT by Dr. William B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, that Mansfield's houses of prostitution are spreading into other parts of the city, after having been closed, by order of the war department, merely serves to revive an age-old problem of what to do with this sort of legally banned but officially tolerated traffic.

In recent years there has been no police effort to interfere with operation of houses of prostitution in Mansfield's rather hazily outlined "segregated district" but a remembered attempt along this line around 25 years ago resulted in a condition similar to that against which Dr. Wild now registers complaint.

Except as a war department measure, set up for the protection of men in military training or service, the problem involved appears to be not greatly different than at any other time—as prevention of spread of venereal diseases seems as important among civilians as among soldiers.

In any event, the presence of a house of prostitution in a residential section outside the prescribed segregated area does not long remain secret.

Anti-British Propaganda Harmful

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — Anti-British propaganda in this country has reached serious proportions, the importance of it being that it impairs our war effort. The effects of this propaganda, mostly word of mouth, are most obvious in the Middle West It is astonishing how many people in that region, especially around Chicago, believe certain things which any well-informed person in Washington knows are absolute lies.

It so happens that the writer has been the only Easterner in a group of Middle Westerners at a series of little gatherings in the last few days. Among stories which were related as established facts, and some of which contradict each other, are the following:

1. Our boys are being sent to their deaths to save the British Empire.

2. The British cannot fight—they ran disgracefully in the Malay campaign which ended with the fall of Singapore.

3. Britain is using almost exclusively for combat service, soldiers from other parts of the world—chiefly Australia.

4. The British Empire is about to break up. Australia will secede as soon as we have made the Pacific safe for her by crushing Japan.

5 This is not our war, never was and never can be, yet we will have to win it, and then be disregarded at the peace table.

NOW let's look at these statements one by one.

1 This country got into the war following an overt act by Japan. Can any one believe that Japan's object was to "save the British Empire"? There is plenty else that could be said. Both political parties through their candidates in the last presidential election (13 months before Pearl Harbor) took the view that the defeat of Hitler was essential to the safety of the United States. Russia was not then fighting Hitler, so apparently both political parties were committed to "saving the British Empire" not for the sake of that empire but for the sake of the United States.

2. and 3. The truth is that there were both British and Australian troops in Malaya. There is no accusation in any responsible quarter that either failed to fight bravely. Several criticisms might be justly made. One was that, after the Jap occupation of French Indo-China not sufficient preparation was made to defend Singapore from the land side. The second was the extraordinary lack of provision for a water supply INSIDE Singapore. (This criticism also applies to Hong-Kong.) The third was that the surprise attack of the Japs in Malaya, as in the Philippines and in Hawaii, resulted in the destruction of so large a percentage of the British and American air force on the ground.

On the charge that British are using territorials and others for combat duty the official casualty figures show that about twenty Britishers have been killed, wounded or captured for every Australian, for every New Zealander, something like 16 to 1 for every Indian and more than 20 to 1 for every South African. And on the charge that the British cannot fight, how about the R.A.F., and the Commandos?

4. It is none of our business, after the war, whether Australia elects to remain a part of the British Empire or to go it alone. All information available here is that she will stick, but with the full liberty of saying anything she pleases about London, as she often has in the past.

5. Concern about what may happen at the peace table should not be permitted to slacken any effort to reach that stage.

Some do not like Britain, and especially the British. Some do not like Russia, especially the Communist form of government. But it might be a good idea to wait until the shooting is over before screaming about it.

Listen World!

The Foe We Face

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THE POWERS THAT BE are peeved at most of us because we feel this war is still unreal, particularly its European aspects. They say that we don't realize that Hitler is an actual man and probably the worst menace the human race has even spawned. And it's true. We don't. It has not been possible for us to do so. We're too fundamentally decent and friendly.

The American imagination cannot visualize monsters. The European way of life, even in peace times, is beyond our comprehension. In war, it became a nightmare which our minds cannot encompass. But at last a man has written about it in terms so simple and from an association so intimate that he has made Hitler and all his hideous satelites live.

I'm talking about Pierre Huss's new book, "The Foe We Face." (Doubleday Doran) Pierre ("Pete") was International News Service head in Berlin for eight years and came to know Hitler and his killer's as intimately as you and I know the corner grocer. He writes simply, as if he were chatting with you, as he did with me the other night before my fire.

But don't be misled by that seeming simplicity. It packs the wallop of searing experience and deadly knowledge of the foulest wolf pack that ever hit the human trail. It should be in the living room of every American who has the slightest interest in his own life or his country's. And no one is entitled to express an opinion about this war unless he has read it.

Pete doesn't rave. He doesn't splash his copy with colorful adjectives. There is no Hollywood within the smoothly moving pages. But there is Hell let loose. There is for instance the story of the gentle nuns, torn from their convents, thrown into the slow degredation and death of concentration camps, for no reason save that they had chosen to serve their Savior. There are pictures of Hitler's hoodlums, gorging like swine in the face of starving people.

And gradually there emerges a fact which few of us, however enlightened, realize—the fact that Germany itself is a demoralized state....that Hitler is by no means omnipotent, even in his own circle of storm troopers.... that the old military group loathes, despises and constantly schemes against these "gutter upstarts" ...that Hitler himself lives in constant peril and fear. Yet still his warped brain weaves its fantastic dream of world empires.

The story of that weaving will amaze many an American. Perhaps you thought that the attack on Pearl Harbor originated in Tokyo, the product of Japanese greed. Guess again! It originated at least two years ago in a German hideout, a Hitler retreat which has its own private railroad of which there is no map.

Even Mussolini does not know where that retreat is, although he has visited it. Pierre Huss visited it, too, at what amounted to royal edict, his hands outside his pockets, well bared, as all hands must be when a man stands before Hitler, his shrewd eyes suavely concealing the disgust he felt for the man who mouthed and slobbered his rage before him. That man was Adolf Hitler in the grip of the deadliest fear he knows, his fear of these United States and "the smiling man who sits in the White House."

Adolf Hitler does not understand the American smile, he does not understand the happy-go-lucky American attitude, its generosity, its friendliness, its terrible grinning fury when aroused. And because he cannot understand and is in terror he screamed his hysteria at an American correspondent, and the American correspondent listened.

The words were old to him. He had heard them many times before. But there was something new in that room, something that stank of horrors beyond any yet practiced. What was it? He did not know then. But he knew on December 7th. For there in that killer's lair the Far East horror was hatched.

Read that book! From the day you do so the war will come alive, no one ever again will be able to say that you are indifferent.

Message From Garcia.

In the Cuban town of Bayamo recently was unveiled a plaque which commemorates the meeting of Lieutenant Rowan and General Calixto Garcia on May 1, 1898. That event was well publicized by Elbert Hubbard in his "Message to Garcia," a snappy sermon on the importance of getting things done.

Hubbard's article left the impression—and it will not be erased—that President McKinley had something important to tell Garcia. The fact was that Rowan sought Garcia in order to learn what the Cuban general knew about the Spanish forces. It was the message from Garcia, not to him, that was of value.

But half myths are as durable as whole ones; and this episode, highly credible to Rowan, now a retired colonel, deserves its niche.—New York Sun.

Problem of Choosing Coordinator Delays Information Consolidation

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—For more than two months the president has been backing and filling on the question of coordinating the numerous government war information agencies under a single head. Chief reason for his long delay is the problem of deciding on the co-ordinator.

More than a score of names have been considered. It's a White House secret, but the list finally has been sifted down to the following five—

William Bullitt, former U. S. ambassador to France and years ago a brilliant foreign correspondent.

Paul W. Garrett, vice president in charge of public relations of General Motors.

Raymond Rubicam, head of Young & Rubicam advertising agency.

Byron Price, war censor and former Associated Press executive.

Lowell Mellett, head of the Office of Government Reports and one-time newspaper editor.

Of the five, Price and Mellett have the most potent inner circle backing.

Pressuring strongly for Price, is White House Secretary Steve Early, an old newspaper chum of Price and largely responsible for his appointment as war censor.

Mellett's principal backer is Judge Sam Rosenman, close personal adviser of the president who asked him to look over the field and recommend names for information co-ordinator. Mellett has told friends he didn't want the job. Also, that he didn't consider Price fitted for it.

Tape Is Still Red.

A GROUP of seven officials in the office of price administration chipped in $20 apiece and made up a purse to lend to office girls who hadn't enough money to pay their room rent.

Reason: Though they had been working for the government a month or more (some since April) the girls had received no pay. The OPA is expanding fast, and the creaking wheels of old line agencies, such as civil service commission and treasury department, can't keep up with the pace.

One of the girls in this distress group had taken a part-time job as a waitress, to earn her dinners, waiting for Uncle Sam to pay off. All of the girls are working overtime.

Murray Retaliation.

PHIL MURRAY is not going to take his curt ouster as vice president of the United Mine Workers lying down.

The CIO executive committee, meeting in Washington this week, will return the booting with a couple of swift kicks to John L. Lewis' paunchy midriff.

Retaliatory moves planned are (1) dismissal of "Denny" Lewis, brother of John L., from his $12,000 a year sinecure as head of the United Construction Workers organizing committee; (2) a militant crackdown on District 50, the mine workers branch which Lewis has been using to organize dairy farmers and raid other CIO jurisdictions.

John appointed "Denny" to the construction workers job and at one time, while boss of the CIO, supported the union with a $20,000 a month handout. Under the CIO constitution, "Denny", not being an elected officer, is subject to removal by the construction workers executive board. Murray and four other Lewis foes constitute the board, and any time they decide to do it, "Denny" is a gone goose.

In this case brother John will face the necessity of adding one more member of his family to the United Mine Workers payroll. Already five are drawing UMW checks.

Feeling within the CIO against District 50 is at fever pitch. Completely under Lewis's domination — his daughter Kathryn is the $7,500 a year secretary-treasurer of the union—District 50 was used by him to give the works to Murray, and for other anti-CIO axing jobs. A number of CIO unions have demanded retaliatory war on District 50, but Murray held them back in the hope that some agreement could be worked out with Lewis.

But with that door closed, the full fury of long smoldering CIO wrath will be turned loose on District 50.

Murray Vs. Lewis.

NEITHER Lewis nor Murray pulled any punches in their verbal battle during the closed-door UMW policy committee sessions preceding Murray's ouster.

Lewis started the fireworks by denouncing Murray's close friend R. J. Thomas, president of the United Auto Workers and James Carey, able young CIO secretary. Lewis followed these cracks by charging that Murray once had called him, Lewis, a Jap. Murray denied that.

"I didn't call you a Jap," he retorted. "But there is one thing you should remember. Even a Jap doesn't turn against his own country."

Murray also bitterly denounced the scheme to dismiss him from his UMW vice presidency as an "indecent and indefensible procedure."

"This is being done by men who don't represent the rank and file of mine workers," Murray charged. "I have been a UMW officer for 25 years and yet I don't know many of those present here today. This room is packed with strange faces."

This charge, however, didn't faze Lewis. Calmly he replied in one of his melodramatic rumbles,

"Mr. Murray says he has been a UMW officer for 25 years. As such he should be fully familiar with all the practices and procedures of the union. If he acquired that familiarity only at this late date, then there is no use discussing them with him."

Note: William Hutcheson, head of the AFL carpenters, who cooked up with Lewis the surprise AFL-CIO peace move he sprang last December, is secretly jockeying to bring the miners back into the AFL fold. Working with Hutcheson is Matty Woll, AFL vice president. Woll and Hutcheson were the chief engineers of the recent AFL peace proposal made by William Green, whom they adroitly used as a "front" for their maneuver. Hutcheson had secretly discussed the maneuver in advance with Lewis.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — It was Tommy Tucker time at the Essex House; so I dropped around for a chat with the North Dakota representative of the Tucker tribe. The boys were in the midst of a short-wave broadcast to Brazil when I got there, but the crowd kept right on dancing. Among the numbers Tommy's band played for the Brazilians was "I Threw A Kiss In The Ocean," and as it was wafted over the ocean it must have sounded to the South American listeners as the same song does to you on Tommy Tucker's recording.

THE voices in this recording seem to be coming from across the water. They had a lot of trouble making it sound like that. First they took one mike into another room and let the voices sing from there. It didn't work. Next they put a paddlewheel in a tub of water. That didn't sound too good. The engineer finally ran the wires into the basement and from there up into the attic and back again several times. It lent the enchantment of watery distance when the voices came in. That's what Tommy Tucker wanted.

Tommy Tucker himself is from Souris, N. D. Population 248. He's a Phi Beta Kappa. In college he never played with a college band, but while an undergraduate he did play piano with professional bands. That helped pay his way through the U. of N. D.

Although he was born in North Dakota, he went to North Carolina to find a wife. She was Virginia Dare Miller. When they're in New York they keep an apartment. And Dare does the cooking. "You get tired of hotel and restaurant food," says Tommy. No doubt it's because he can't forget that home cooking he found in North Carolina.

The band's signature is "I Love You," a number Tommy wrote while under the influence of a Tybee beach setting, down in Savannah. It is a beauty. The vocal is sung by the Voices Three, meaning Amy Arnell, Don Brown, and Kerwin Somerville. You'd never have thought anything was the matter with Miss Arnell when I was there, but an hour after I left she was rushed to a N. Y. hospital for an emergency appendectomy. She's doing fine.

AMY ARNELL takes her career very seriously. She's from Portsmouth, Va. She spends $7.50 a day for special instruction. Don Brown is what the boys call "Our romantic baritone." He gets mad when they describe him that way. Don has done practically everything. He used to work on a railroad. He used to play semi-pro football.

Pretty soon the band will lose its bass player, Al Iossi. He goes into the army. The boys will be sorry to see Al go, in a way. He's the band paymaster.

I mention this because I thought you'd want to know these things about Tommy Tucker, and Amy Arnell, and Don Brown, and Al Iossi and the others the next time you click on a radio and hear the announcer say, "It's Tommy Tucker Time . . ."

A Farmer's Diary

Chemurgy

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

IN COFFEE COUNTY, Alabama, the soil was rich and cotton was long the main crop. Many farmers mortgaged the crop before it was planted, but since, each year, they paid the mortgage and had a living beside, all went well. When the cotton crop depleted the soil in one place, they moved it to another.

Then came the invasion of the boll weevil from the far south, and for a time agriculture was a failure in Coffee county. Farmers became discouraged. Many moved away.

Now Coffee county is back on the map, more prosperous than ever. At Enterprise they have erected a monument to the boll weevil! Its coming forced a change in the system of farming, and that change was the best thing that ever happened.

Cotton had been the crop of the fathers and grandfathers. Their sons got their wits together, consulted chemists and soil experts, and planted peanuts. Peanuts are legumes that enrich the soil. George Washington Carver, the peanut wizard, pioneered new uses for the lowly goober. Now even cloth as well as fuel oil—more than 50 varieties of products—can be produced from peanuts.

Farmer and chemist, working together, are going places! The future of farming has never looked so interesting as now, when revolutionary changes in practice and in uses of products are happening every day. Pestiferous ragweed has yielded excellent oil for paint—dandelions, milkweed, sumac, wild cotton and goldenrod may be used for rubber. The Italian army wears uniforms made of skimmed milk — fibers with much the same chemical analysis as wool. In fact, from samples I have seen—brought to me at my farm by a farm journal salesman—such cloth cannot be told from firmly woven woolen.

Who knows how many profitable crops may be developed from the more than a thousand plants we now call weeds!

Chemurgy will help take acres from the plow and give them back to pasture and to forest. Pasturing will not injure the soil or deplete it much, unless overgrazed. The farmer will use his land and keep it, too—and everyone will profit.

Mass Production Frocks Stylish

Left, peppermint striped pique suit: center, glazed chintz dirndl; right, pique dirndl with appliques.

By SUSAN BARDEN
International Illustrated News Writer

MASS PRODUCTION styles were shown at a recent fashion show. These earthy models were designed for a famous American mail order house, and were impressive because of the beautiful cut, fine materials and high-style influence reflected throughout the collection. And most amazing of all was the fact that every item in the colorful group was happily priced under $10.

Most of the models that were exhibited were of cotton, though a few were of rayon They ranged from blue denim coveralls, for factory defense work, and overalls for farmerettes, to decorative dirndls with chemise bodices of printed glazed chintz or printed percale.

Surprising sophistication was evidenced in the red and beige corduroy slack sets, tropical print play dresses, yellow playsuit shown with black accessories, pique, seersucker and gingham town suits, monogrammed tennis shorts and green and white print town dresses.

White on Color.

Clear contrast of white on color was featured in the prints for summer suits and dresses.

The three outfits pictured above are excellent examples of the smartness and practicality of these new clothes.

One of the high fashions of the show was the red and white peppermint striped pique suit. The jacket is cut on classic cardigan lines and is bound in red. The slim pleated skirt is beautifully tailored and finished.

One of the two dresses is also made of crisp fine white pique, and has big red apples appliqued on the skirt above a red band. Smaller apples are on each of the short sleeves and the neck is cut in a curving square.

The other frock is made of yellow glazed chintz in a dirndl design. It features a slim little basque and a beguiling youthful neckline. The material is in a sunfast, colorfast print.

hange of cenery Is uggested

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

r Miss Fairfax:

fy boy friend and I have been ng steady for two years, and devotedly in love with him. He s he loves me, but nothing is r said about marriage. Yet we m to have what is called an derstanding."

hree years ago I had a ner- s breakdown, and was in a home for six months, but was harged as cured. This uncer- nty about my boy friend has ed me to worry and is bring- back some of my former ible.

o you advise me to go away a while to get a complete nge, for my health's sake, and d up my strength again so t I may be able to go about enjoy myself as formerly? v can I find out if he cares ugh to marry me?

Unhappy.

ou're very sensible, my dear, go away and not let the un- ainties of this situation im- l your health. To tell you not vorry over this state of affairs sking almost too much of hu- nature. It's nerve-racking, you're wise to leave it for a le. Perhaps the chaos in world irs is holding him back, he be expecting to be called in draft. However, it would be right thing for him to discuss plans with you. You're entitled know.

ou have my best wishes that gs come out the way you t.

r Miss Fairfax:

m 16 years old and have only more year in high school. I n have chances to go to school es with boys in my class, but mother objects to my accept- dates until I am 18. By that , however, my schooldays will ver and I feel I'm missing so h.

an you suggest some way I persuade my mother that she ly ought to allow me to go to ol affairs? Or do you think ght to wait until I'm 18? I so out of everything when I the other girls tell about boy friends.

any parents have the same as yours concerning their school daughters—that girls ld wait until they're 18 be- having dates with boys. But n't think there'd be any harm girl going with a group to of the school affairs. It's too for anyone to stay at home ing the role of Cinderella. ie age at which a girl may a single date with a boy is o her parents, as long as she ving at home and is provided y them. I know this may seem to you, but perhaps you can uade your mother that all you want to do is go to some of the school dances and other affairs.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I moved from a large city to a small town, where I became acquainted with the girls. They all have their own special girl chums, so I was quite lonesome for a while. Finally they accepted me into their crowd but I always feel like an outcast. Whenever a girl is invited anywhere, she takes her special friend along, and that leaves me at home. Is there anything I can do, or do you think I should be satisfied to be "one of the crowd"? I am 14 years old.

A. E.

Girls of your age go in for cliques, and I think you're comparatively fortunate to be taken into the charmed circle at all. You'll just have to bide your time until you're an older member of the crowd.

Meanwhile, ask your mother to let you have a little party for the whole bunch. Chocolate and sandwiches will be enough in the way of refreshments and you can play games. If you get a prize from the Five-and-Ten, it always puts more pep into the evening, no matter how inexpensive it is.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 19 years old and went steady with my boy friend for six months. We were very much in love and hoped to marry some day in the not-too-distant future.

All of a sudden another young man came into my life and nearly swept me off my feet. He took me out, bought me flowers and candy, and wanted to marry me. I though I had at last found my ideal and told my boy friend how things stood. I told him I hoped we could remain good friends always.

For a month or so everything went along all right, and then the new young man seemed to lose interest. I came to the conclusion that I didn't like him so much after all. I'm pretty sure I hurt Dick very much and I feel terrible, but the question is how can I get Dick back? I really want him very much, and not the new young man at all.

Jerry.

Don't you think it would be well to be as frank with Dick as you have been with me? I'm sure he'll understand. Say you were mistaken and are sorry. At the same time, don't be too humble, that doesn't do. We all make mistakes. Tell Dick that, feeling as you did toward this new young man, it was only a sense of fairness that caused you to tell him how you felt at once.

I feel confident, if some other girl hasn't annexed Dick in the meantime, that things will be even better than they were before.

Corn Souffle.

Pitfalls of Love

(A sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

I STARED at Jack, horrified. "Give that back to me!" I said militantly, and there must have been something compelling in my voice, for he meekly handed over the ivory cube.

"Have you gone out of your mind?" I demanded. "Even if you should go out of the world, this should belong to Katharine. And you dared to think of crushing it!"

"Better that than to leave it for Katharine, and have her torn between her loyalty to a dead past which would bid her preserve it, and that to a living future which would urge her to destroy it."

An Old Romance.

I girded myself for combat and spoke truculently.

"Where did you get this idea about a living future for Katharine? Are you just sounding a rhetorical note, or have you something specific in mind? Frankly, I do not like your tone."

"I told you I could not blame her," he reiterated, apparently unmoved by my gibe.

"Will you kindly tell me what you mean?"

"I mean Hal Meredith," he said.

"I thought that would be the answer," I said with purposeful scorn in my voice. "What have you heard about Hal Meredith? And who told you? The ever-solicitous Ruth Hayes, sympathetic 'wilderness woman,' I suppose.

He gave a violent start and the blood rushed to his face, then receded again, leaving him ashen.

"We are talking at cross purposes, Madge," he said quietly at last. "Let us put our cards on the table."

"That is what I am anxious to do," I told him.

"Then, to begin with," he said, "let me assure you solemnly that I never have been romantically attracted by Ruth Hayes. For a long time I admired her as a comrade who made life comfortable for her brother and for me, under most trying conditions. But after a while I began to resent what I considered her attempts to manage my life, as she did her brother's.

"Then she told me—saying that she did it as a sisterly duty—of reports reaching her from home that Dr. Hal Meredith, a brilliant alienist, had been injured in an airplane accident, and that Katharine had saved his life by going to the hospital after he had called for her in his delirium. Ruth added that it was reported Katherine was only waiting to divorce me, to marry Meredith.

"I was so angry at Ruth that I hardly could answer her decently. Finally I reminded her that I was not her brother, and that I resented her bringing me such a story, which I branded as a tissue of lies.

"She was almost maudlin in her apologies, and said in all probability she had been misinformed. But I never could feel any sort of friendship or comradeship for her again.

Didn't Doubt Katharine.

"My only reaction then was anger at Ruth," he went on. "I felt no doubt of Katharine at all. In the early days of our marriage she told me herself of that old romance with Hal Meredith, just as I had told her about you. I also knew of the near tragedy when Meredith's insane wife died, leaving a legacy from her crazed brain which almost spelled a murder trial and disgrace for Katharine.

"I repeat, I felt no doubt at all of Katharine's loyalty. But shortly after that her letters to me ceased, and years passed. Then I began to wonder if at last she had tired of the difficulties of life with me and had, turned to someone more worthy."

His voice ran down like a spent top, and I improved the pause.

"Which was exactly what Ruth Hayes planned when she stole Katharine's letters to you from the camp mail pouch," I said with slow emphasis.

Why is it unsound for North and South to try to make a slam in hearts on this deal in preference to clubs?

There Are All Kinds Of Women

By MME. QUI VIVE

There are all kinds of women. Some are belles, some are wall flowers. They class themselves through the ideas they cherish, through temperament, speech, manners. You like them or you don't like them. If you started to make a list of different types, the list would be as long as your arm. Some are sweet and some are sour. Why the sour ones can't see that they're getting in their own hair, your reporter can't even guess. Some are gay, others dour. The dour ones have a tough time living with themselves. Life treats most of us pretty much alike, bringing blessings and sorrows. So it isnt that. We make our personality. And many a woman pays a high price for the privilege.

Be yourself is a term we hear on every hand. But many of us have two selves, sometimes several selves. When we feel well and bouyant we are strong and gay enough. But let some small disappointment come along and we collapse. Can't stand a thing. Is that to any one's credit?

The sisterhood is striving for good looks. Millions spent for sartorial draperies, fragrant items in the cosmetic cabinet, sessions at the beauty shop. But there's no profit from that investment if a woman hasn't endearing qualities. It isn't just how she looks. It is what she says, how she acts.

Human nature being what it is, we can't expect to be angels. But we can refrain from back biting, from getting into unpleasant arguments, being arrogant, talking down to persons in humbler positions.

There are women, and men too, who say "I am as I am; I cannot change. You'd think that they'd learn something as they travel through the years. Don't they ever sit down and look eye to eye with themselves? Can't they see that they have made mistakes, can avoid them in the future? Can't the sharp-tongued woman realize that cruel words have gained her nothing? Her alibi is that other people are thin-skinned, too sensitive. How about herself? We're all sensitive to wounds.

Take the bossy woman. She tells everybody what to do, how to settle their difficulties. Has she been able to settle her own? Probably not. There's no soft light in her eyes. She can spend her life in beauty shops getting facials and her face will stay just the same—hard jaw lines, stiff neck, all the signs of bossiness.

HOROSCOPE

FOR WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3

ALTHOUGH there may be very definite promise of promotion, preferment, favors or other tokens of esteem from superiors, employers or those able to advance the ambitions and high objectives yet these may be attended by several adverse indications of treachery, fraud, misrepresentation and other undercurrent machinations to be guarded against. Also the money factor will probably not be encouraging and calls for particular fortification. Be cautious with all writings and speech.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of attaining many of their objectives and cherished ambitions, with elders, superiors, employers or others in place and power. Nevertheless there are signs of financial danger through fraud, duplicity, misrepresentation, with much subtlety and trickery to be armed for. Speech, writings, travel, agencies and communications all combine to arouse to sagacity, vigilance and well-considered action and manipulation.

A child born on this day while possessing many talents and intellectual as well as personal traits to recommend it and further its high ambitions, yet may be subject to financial losses through fraud and misrepresentation. It may suffer through lax speech or writings.

"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T BE A ROBOT

Signals to your partner, with high cards, and low cards, are very fine and necessary to help direct a strong defense. They are not absolute commands at any time, however. On many an occasion the partner of a signaler knows something, from seeing his own hand, which is more important to the side than anything his partner knows. In such a case, he must do what he knows is best, disregarding his partner's discard.

When West passed his partner's double on this deal, it was obviously because he thought he could beat the contract to the extent of more points than his own side could make if he bid. He was right, especially since he knew North as one of those playeres who will bid a very weak No Trump, but East spilled the applecart beyond repair.

After the spade A won the 3, which was led, East decided that an effort to obtain a third round ruff of a club would be the best defense, and therefore laid down the club A. Knowing what he did, and that his partner could probably win the first round of trumps, he should have disregarded the club 3 which his partner played, and should have led another club. He slavishly followed the discouraging signal, however, and led the heart 7. West won with the A and returned his club 9, expecting his partner to ruff, but instead East had another club and the contract was made, although West took two more trump tricks.

If East had led his club 10 to the third trick, West would have won the first trump round with the heart A, and returned his third club for the ruff, which would have caused defeat of the contract, giving the pair a good instead of bad result.

ynes greeted Stone cordially. ighty glad to see you," he "and if I can do anything to help you, I'm gladder yet. Any news about Alma?"

Stone noticed the way he pronounced the name, and he had no further doubt, that this was the man who had come into the coat room next after Brand Herrick.

"Nothing direct, no. I want to tell you frankly, though, that I have learned that you purchased that diamond bangle."

"Well, then, you're all my fancy painted you! I don't mind admitting it to you, but I'd rather Hugh didn't know it. But I make no stipulations."

"No, don't."

Haynes looked at him. "Mr. Stone, does that make you suspect me of the murder?"

"Not that alone, no. Mr. Haynes, the murderer was the man whom entered that room last, that night. I mean last of you four men, whom Captain Raynor questioned. Now, here's my perplexity. You say, it is your belief that Herrick came in just after you were there."

"Does Herrick deny that?"

"No, he doesn't deny it, but he thinks the man who entered the room as he was leaving it might have been you, and he has a reason for thinking so."

"Mr. Stone, if I should tell you that I did go into the room by one door, as Brand was going out at the other, would you conclude that I was the murderer?"

"It would be, to a degree, evidence of your guilt."

"Why? Why do you and Raynor decide that only we four fellows are to be suspected? There were others at the party. Other men went in and out."

"I have been informed, that the last of you four who entered, committed the crime. It was discovered immediately after."

"They haven't the time pinned down as closely as that. Mr. Stone, I did not kill that girl. I did not kill Mrs. McCleod. I took her the bangle, and I gave it to her; she adored it, and said, 'I shall tell Hugh that I bought this myself, with my own money!' I agreed, as I would have agreed to anything she said. I was deeply in love with her, Mr. Stone. We all were. That may shock you, but it is true. No one could know that girl without loving her, and the more one strove against it, the more luring she became. Admiration was her very life."

"Did she love any of you in return?"

"Not she! She just laughed if any one became serious and told him to clear out. And if he cleared out, it was only to drift back again."

"On whom does your suspicion fall?"

"I don't know, but I'll say any one but Brand Herrick! That chap is a cut above the rest of us. I mean he is honorable and clean-minded. He didn't fall for Alma's charms as the rest of us did, and that only made her try harder to win him."

* * *

Again Stone noticed the odd way Haynes pronounced the name, and he felt certain that he had come into the room after Brand, but he had not killed Mrs. McCleod. There was something about Haynes' voice and his manner of speaking that commanded Stone's confidence.

The detective was deeply troubled. He took a shot in the dark.

"Did you ever see a girl whose front teeth were separated—just a trifle?" he said.

Van stared at him.

"Why," he began, "I've seen two or three in my life, I suppose, but not lately—hold on, though, I have. Now where in the devil did I see her? Not long ago, but I can't place her. It was at some mingle. Why, goshamighty, it was at the McCleod party. But I don't know who she was. Not one of our crowd, I'm sure."

"If the name comes to you, let me know. Didn't you dance with her?"

"No. But Og Murray did. He was with her for some time, and then she disappeared. A Cinderella act, sort of."

"Never mind; not likely she's the one I want to find."

"Probably not. She was a Lucy Gray sort of person. I was introduced to her. She did have a cute smile, and I noticed her teeth."

"All right, if you see her again, ask her what her name is."

Stone left young Haynes without telling him that he was going to see Ogden Murray, but he made a bee line for that gentleman's office.

When Stone introduced himself, Murray said, almost gruffly, "What can I do for you?"

"Just answer a few questions," Stone replied amiably. He took a seat without being asked.

"I'm exceedingly busy," Murray said. "Shall you be long about it?"

"I think not. It has to do with the McCleod party."

"You mean Alma's death? I know nothing about that."

"It is not her death that I want to speak about, Mr. Murray. It has to do with a young lady who was at the party, but who did not belong to what Mrs. McCleod called her crowd. This young lady had a sweet smile, which showed her front teeth slightly separated. Do you know her?"

"I know the girl you mean. I never saw her before that night or since. Don't tell me she's mixed up in the murder!"

"No, indeed. It's another affair. What was this girl's name?"

"I don't remember. We flirted a bit, and we had a drink together. She went home early. She was with Miss Malcolm. Wait a minute, her name will come to me. I've got it! It is Una Deane. That's all I know about her."

"I'm glad to get that much information. Now the lady she went with, who was she?"

"Miss Malcolm, the artist. She's a landscape painter, and stands pretty high, I believe."

"Do you know where I can find her?"

"I don't know where she lives, but I know she is one of the patronesses of that big School of Design on Madison avenue. I guess the Deane girl studies there."

"How old is the Deane girl?"

"I'd say about twenty-one or two, but she may be more. She isn't really pretty, but she has a nice way with her, and she knows how to dress."

So eager was Fleming Stone to carry on a hunt for this art student with separated teeth, and so disinclined was he to say anything to Ogden Murray about his oil stock, that he left the office without mentioning either oil or Emmy.

He went straight home, and sat down in his study to think things out. He hadn't much hope of the Una Deane matter, but it would be exciting to follow the hint Murray had given him.

The telephone bell rang.

It was Dickson, the valet calling. He said that Miss Emmy McCleod was dead, and that she had been murdered.

Stone tautened to attention and asked Dickson if he had better come over.

Dickson replied that he didn't know, to wait a minute and he would ask Mr. McCleod. In a minute he reported that Mr. McCleod said, for Mr. Stone to come right over as soon as he could.

So Stone went.

Sport Podge

I wasn't going to say a word about this, because there's no reason why a word should be said about it, beyond the words that popped out spontaneously at the time and which haven't become more printable since.

And furthermore I had promised Westbrook Country club Pro Tom Raklets that I wouldn't say a word about it.

But so many persons have demanded to know why nothing was said about the "match" I had with Raklets last week that I feel forced to break the silence. (Confidentially, I was withholding the information until it could no longer give comfort to the enemy.)

To keep the record straight, it wasn't a match, merely a round of golf. I had promised Raklets I would give him a golf lesson, and was just carrying out the promise.

Of course my method of teaching golf is somewhat irregular. I show 'em everything they shouldn't do and let 'em go on from there. First fundamental of this teaching technique is this word of caution: "Spray and pray from tee to green, and then, pray, brother, pray."

I fear I gave Raklets too big a dose of this teaching method for the first time out, for the last thing the puzzled pro said as we left the field of battle was:

"Don't print my score unless you print yours." Which gives you some idea.

Of course I couldn't have printed my score anyhow. Because I don't know yet what the score was. These higher mathematics always did bother me.

But I'm pretty sure Tom was able to count as high as he went. The scores really were more tremendous than terrific.

Raklets is mighty proud of his new golf home at Westbrook.

"You can go all over the country and not find a course kept up better than this one," he declared.

I took him at his word. I went all over the country. But I can't testify as to the course because I wasn't on it often enough. But the rough, brother, was wonderful.

I bounced my ball in rough and bunker,
And on the green I never sunk 'er.

Reds Depend On Home Stand

'Make or Break' Set of Games Looms Ahead.

CINCINNATI—(AP)—With three victories in four games as a starter, the Cincinati Reds today continue an 18-game home stand which local baseball experts believe will make or break them for 1942.

Today's opposition is Philadelphia—something of a break for a club with a half dozen of its 25 players out with injuries, including regulars Frank McCormick, first baseman, and Mike McCormick, outfielder.

While Buck probably won't play any this week, and Mike be out until about Aug. 1, four other cripples should be in shape by the time the Phils' series ends with a night game Wednesday.

The Redlegs are in a tie with New York for fourth on the .500 per cent mark.

In the last two weeks the Reds have won nine of 15, but .600 ball isn't good enough to put them up in the chase.

Elmer Ridle, whose only victory and complete game in six starts this year has been against the Phils, is today's likely hurler unless Paul Derringer, who lost by one run to the Phils two weeks ago, gets the nod. Si Johnson, who won that game from Derringer, is the Phils' probable.

Dope Upset In Association Race

(By Associated Press)

The American Association season is almost two months old and the scramble for positions only faintly resembles pre-season forecasts.

The railbirds have hit the bullseye only on Louisville, picked for fifth and, now fifth. They named Milwaukee and Kansas City to finish second and third. Currently, they are first and second. The greatest miss thus far was the prediction for Columbus to repeat as champ. The Red Birds are tied with St. Paul for sixth and seventh.

Dodgers Meet Test In West

"Dem Bums Done It Before, Do'd It Again."

(By International News Service)

THE Brooklyn Dodgers went west once before this year and managed to come back to home grounds still holding to the National league lead and they are about to try that same little trick again, beginning today at Pittsburgh.

The Dodgers have won 17 of their last 23 games and are out in front by six games over the St. Louis Cardinals and another two over the Boston Braves, while the Pittsburgh Pirates in the last few weeks have been beaten off entirely and now are down in seventh place, instead of still being contenders.

As the eastern clubs of the National go into the west for a good long road swing it seems entirely likely that the Dodgers will manage to stay up there in the top spot. What's more, their Pete Reiser will be attempting at the same time to maintain a batting average which now stands at .348.

While the Dodgers are busy with their opening series at Pittsburgh, other clubs in the circuit will be engaged at the other western points—New York at Chicago, Philadelphia at Cincinnati and Boston at St. Louis, the latter being a night contest.

Clubs in both circuits swing back into action after an off day yesterday, with the western American league clubs playing in the east.

Chicago opens today against the New York Yankees, Cleveland at Boston, Detroit at Philadelphia and St. Louis at Washington, the Philadelphia and Washington games being at night.

The Yankees face the opposing westerners with a comfortable eight game lead and little chance of any appreciable inroads being made on their edge.

* * *

The Yankees' longest winning streak of the year—eight straight—was stopped Sunday by the Athletics, but they have little to worry about now if the team continues to click as it has all season.

Dodgers Pack Punch But Giants Have Murderers' Row

By DILLON GRAHAM
(Wide World Sports Editor)

NEW YORK—Brooklyn packs the team punch in the National league but the real Murders' Row slug for the Giants.

Ott, Mize, Marshall, Lieber and Danning—that's a gang of ball blasters a rival pitcher can't ease up on a moment. If he does, his game has likely gone blooey.

If Master Melvin, the former "boy wonder" who now pilots the Jints, could lay hands on a couple of capable chunkers, the crew from the Polo Grounds might challenge the league supremacy of their cross-town rivals of Ebbetts Field.

Ott's earliest moves as a manager indicated he wanted an offensive unit. He bought burly John Mize, a long-distance knocker, from the Cards, arranged for Hank Leiber to return from the Cubs and came up with a rookie slugger in Willard Marshall. This trio, along with Ott himself and Harry the Horse Danning, provided the punch—but Ott couldn't locate the pitching.

A glance at the batting averages doesn't reveal the full strength of the Giants. But in the runs-batted-in department—the real payoff—and in homers, the Giants' quintet has dealt out more damage than any other fivesome in the league.

Late in May the triple left-hand punch furnished by Mize, Ott and Marshall was the league's only trio boasting 20 or more runs apiece driven home. And these three also have smashed more home runs than any other trio. You have to go over to the other league to find a trio that can match the Giants in runs batted in. The Yankees haven't got one, but the Boston Red Sox have in Ted Williams, Bobby Doerr and Pete Fox.

JOHNNY MIZE

Ott has a serious candidate for rookie-of-the-year honors in Marshall, a youngster up from Atlanta who was not even figured in Giant plans when the spring training drills opened. Marshall's hits haven't been too frequent and his average is only slightly above .250 but the recruit's blows have been long and have come at times when men were on the sacks. At this writing, he's leading the league in runs batted in.

Ott's hopes of challenging for the flag have been hurt not only by poor pitching but by an injury to Leiber, the illness of Third Baseman Bill Werber and the inability of either Mickey Witek or Rookie Connie Ryan to handle second base satisfactorily.

INDIANS SCHEDULE ADDED NIGHT GAME

CLEVELAND—(INS)—Already scheduled to play 23 night games this year, more than in any previous season, the Cleveland Indians today face another nocturnal contest, July 2, with the Chicago White Sox at Chicago for an army-navy relief benefit.

Will Harridge, president of the American league, set a total of $375,000 as its goal for the relief funds. The first four benefit games drew slightly more than $40,000. Harridge also assigned three double headers, Washington at New York, St. Louis at Detroit, and Boston at Philadelphia for Sunday, Aug. 23.

Trapshooting Threatened

Tourney Marksmen Feel War Pressure.

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—The tournament trapshooter—like the Sunday drive and the automobile salesman—is destined to become a casualty of the war, officials of the Ohio State Trapshooting association believe.

Surveying prospects for the 56th annual OSTA tournament, which will be held in Columbus this week-end, officials said today that war bans on tires and sale of shotguns as well as the scarcity of shells will make this tournament the association's last for the duration of the war.

An estimated 150 men, women and junior marksmen will meet Friday, Saturday and Sunday to compete for $2,100 in prizes and an imposing set of trophies.

Association officials said that the draft, the irreplacability of tires and the threatened rationing of gasoline will keep many trapshooters away from the meet. Joe Hiestand, Hillsboro farmer and last year's doubles champion who is teaching air corps recruits the art of shooting moving targets, will be missing from the lineup.

Karl Maust of Columbus will defend his Ohio singles crown and will seek a trip to the champion of champions contest at the Grand American shoot at Vandalia late in August.

Mark Hootman of Hicksville, former Grand American champion, and Carl Most of Cincinnati, who took the professional title a year ago, will be in the lineup once more.

Keiser Captures 3rd Akron Title

AKRON—(INS)—Three years ago Herman Keiser, 27-year-old pro of the Firestone club, came to Akron. Today he is in possession of his third Akron open golf championship.

Leading his field by four strokes, Keiser carded 31-36—67 and 33-37—70 for a 36-hole total of 137 over the Fairlawn course. In second place was Reggie Myles, Cleveland district champion of Columbia Hills, who stroked 36-37—73 and 34-34—68 for 141.

* * *

Tied for third were Ed Kerby, Fairlawn pro, and Tony Vitt, Cleveland amateur from Sleepy Hollow, with rounds of 69-75—144 and 76-68—144. Kerby has won the title five times.

Foxx Leaves American League, Goes To Cubs

Foxx in 1925 — Foxx today — Red Sox star

After 17 years with Philadelphia and Boston of the American league, Jimmy Foxx, slugging infielder of the Red Sox, goes to the Chicago Cubs in a cash deal. Foxx, who has a .332 average for 17 years in the majors, has played but little this year. He came up to the A's in 1925 as a catcher.

Gordon, Doerr Smack Apple

Continue Struggle For American Loop Lead.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Joe (Flash) Gordon of the New York Yankees and Bobby Doerr of the Boston Red Sox still are carrying on their private struggle for the batting leadership of the American league, but they are down now to a point where they can be seen with the naked eye by other prominent hitters.

The Yankee ace is on top today with a .380, bolstered by an 18-game hitting streak. Three points behind is the star second baseman of the Red Sox.

One of the most interesting aspects of the batting competition, however, is that Gordon (Babe) Phelps of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has pulled into the National league lead with .373, thus bringing a representative of the senior circuit into proximity of the leading hitters of the American league for the first time in many weeks.

Phelps increased his average 40 points in the last week while Ray Lamanno, Cincinntai's rookie catcher who led previously, slumped from .366 to .319.

Pete Reiser of Brooklyn, the batting champ in the senior circuit last year, moved into second place with .343, a gain of 15 points.

The American league's 1941 champion, Ted Williams of Boston, also staged a big spurt during the week, soaring 30 points to a .330 percentage to rank sixth in his league, two points behind teammate Johnny Pesky.

Defending Champs Defeat Autocall

SHELBY—Ohio Seamless Tube company, defending champions of Shelby Softball league, defeated Autocall company, 6 to 5, Monday night in the opening league game at Municipal Water company diamond on North Gamble street.

* * *

The Autocall company took the lead first but the Tube company staged a rally in the seventh inning to score five runs and to take the lead.

Bob Laubie, pitching for the Tube company, struck out two batters, gave seven hits and walked five players. Stillwell on the mound for the Autocall gave six hits, struck out two batters and walked three.

And the air corps technical school at Keesler Field, Miss., is lining up a ten-game schedule with such colleges as Miami, Alabama, Purdue and Texas Aggies on the list. . . . Foxx Shrugs, Packs His Bag

Looks on National as Interesting Experience.

By BILL KING

BOSTON — (AP) — The faintest shrug of the shoulders was the only reaction Jimmy Foxx, one of baseball's greatest moderns, exhibited when he experienced the most surprising shock in his 18 major league seasons—his sale to the Chicago Cubs by the Boston Red Sox after seven other clubs had waived him out of the American league.

"Well, it should be a very interesting experience," Foxx said.

"Chicago is a great city and I'll like playing for my old friend Jimmy Wilson.

"I really don't know much about the National league, for I never though I ever would be in it," Foxx continued, "in fact being traded anywhere was a matter that never occurred to me."

* * *

Foxx, now sidelined by a fractured rib, his reward for his most recent display of teamsmanship—serving as a batting practice pitcher in the Yankee Stadium last week, has assured his new bosses he will report in Chicago tomorrow and will be ready to perform for them early next week. During their phone conversation, Foxx was warned that he was coming into a curve-ball league. "Don't worry about that," he replied. "It won't bother me."

And that was the only boast Foxx, made as he prepared to transfer from the younger to the older circuit.

"I regret I have to leave Boston and the American league after all these years," he said. "But I'll still be in the majors."

MEL HARDER HURLS OPENER AT BOSTON

BOSTON—(AP)—It was up to Mel Harder today to pitch his mates to their first victory over Boston, which almost two weeks ago pounded Mel in an 8 to 3 shellacking to start the Indians' slump, now composed of 11 losses in their last 13 games.

Although Harder has lost three games in six tries, Boston is the only team that has hit him hard this season. His opponent, Charley Wagner, registered one of the wins.

Alsab Liked At Belmont

But Jockey Wright Goes For Shut Out.

By JACK MAHON

NEW YORK—(INS)—The biggest racing day in New York history may provide one of the biggest turf upsets in years!

Saturday is the day, Belmont park is the track, and Shut Out is the horse.

This is no idle chatter or a tout service. The Belmont Stakes, third jewel in the famed triple crown of the American turf, happens to be the prize attraction of the day and the fabulous and famous Alsab happens to be the colt the largest mob ever to gather at an eastern track will send to the post as favorite.

It has been written, and we don't mean by any Arabic philosophers, that Alsab will canter home all by himself and may not be beaten for the rest of the year. This is all very well with a great majority of the citizens of this village but a young man named Wayne Wright, jockey, happens to think otherwise.

You will recall that Shut Out won the Kentucky Derby, in which Alsab was a fast-closing second and the "Sab" came back, a week later, to trounce the Whitney flyer in the Preakness Stakes.

Brother Wright was discussing the time of the day and the state of the nation with us recently and, by some freak of fortune, happened to be inveigled into a discussion of this return meeting of the two colts.

"Listen, friend," he said, "you had better pay a little attention to Shut Out in the Belmont."

Since Wright not only knows the colt better than anyone else and probably won't even ride him Saturday, this was, to put it mildly, a remark to remember.

Did he mean to imply that Shut Out could beat Alsab?

"I certainly do," said Wayne. "I think Shut Out will beat him and with some thing to spare. Alsab was within a length of Shut Out at the head of the stretch in the Kentucky Derby and he didn't gain a bit on him in the drive."

What about the Preakness?

"The colt didn't like the track at Pimlico. I know it and that's no alibi. He simply wouldn't run over it and you can throw that race out. He's in shape, now, and he'll beat Alsab in the Belmont."

There it is, men—right from Wright.

Writer Hits Louis Criers

Suggests They'd Help Joe More By Silence.

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK—(INS)—I wish I could shut up and mind my own business, but that's the way it is with some of us. We keep going around butting in where we are not wanted and meddling in things where we can't be of any help. Like the Joe Louis situation.

Louis still hasn't been given permission to get out of the Army and take on anybody, and possibly won't get it, but I would like to state here, that the newspapers aren't helping his case any, when they carry great, lengthy stories on his need of a fight to pay his $117,000 income taxes for last year. The papers are full of such stuff around here.

The answer to that one must be that some of the rest of us have taxes to meet. That goes for some of the gents in uniforms too, no doubt, but no one is trying to help them figure their way out of it. They get up the scratch the best way they can and if they can't then that's just too bad.

Louis is one of the great human beings of these times. When he was asked to defend his heavyweight championship free of charge to benefit service relief funds his answer in each case was a terse, "I'm willing to do what ever you want me to."

There is nothing wrong with him and perhaps he deserves, as so many insist, a chance to make some money for himself. But his confidential advisers are not helping his case any by asking that he be permitted to fight so he can pay his taxes.

In fact, several things are working against him, not over looking what has appeared to be the slightly excessive expense accounts turned in by his managers for his two charity shows. Inasmuch as Louis gave away $83,246 in purses in his two fights and the gross revenue for the service funds was $154,072 his managers probably weren't out of line in their expense accounts looking at it from one angle.

In the first place Louis didn't have to give up all that money, if he didn't want to, but somehow it all seems a little shoddy for this pressure to be exerted in his behalf for income taxes. It also seems a little petty for him to be doing so much and yet have expense accounts turned in that cause talk.

As a matter of fact, if we want to see Louis fight again before this war is over, to help himself and charity at the same time, we had better do a little less campaigning in his behalf. The Army is very touchy and might get downright cantankerous to such a point that Louis simply wont be permitted to fight at all, as I reported some time ago would be the case.

* * *

One thing is certain, his case is hanging fire for a considerable time beyond the expected deadline. Meanwhile, some of the public prints are getting right out there and pleading for him.

A little more of this and the Army will not even consider his case.

TRIES COMEBACK

SAN JOSE, Calif.—(AP)—Henry Armstrong, former world champion in three divisions, started back along the comeback trail tonight with a technical knockout in the fourth round over "Irish" Johnny Taylor, of Oakland. Taylor was substituting for Ceclio Lozada. Armstrong weighted 148 and Taylor 147.

'STRATEGY FOR DEMOCRACY' AT CITY LIBRARY

Authors Tell of Economic and Political Principles That Form Victory Basis.

A vigorous examination of the economic and political realities with which the American people must deal if a progressive and workable world order is to be constructed is presented in "Strategy for Democracy," a new title at the Mansfield Public Labrary.

The authors, J. Donald Kingsley and David W. Pelegorsky, analyze the principles of international economic, political and military organization, along with the techniques of economic planning on which victory both in war and peace must be based.

TOMORROW WILL COME by Martha von Almedingen is made up of the reminiscences of a gently Russian - English woman through the bitter years of her youth in Russia during the early twentieth century, through the Revolution, and up to 1922 when she escaped to England via Italy. She lived through famine, near madness, loneliness, and near death, and now she is established in England where she has become a translator and medieval historian.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF JAMES I. PRICE, JUNGLE JIM by Price and McCoy is a collection of stories based on the author's career in the jungles of Central America, where he has spent the last twenty years. THE CHILDREN by Nina Fedorova, author of "The Family," takes the reader first to Tientsin, then far north in Manchuria to Harbin, a social center for Russian exiles, then back to Tientsin in the years of 1938-39. It is the story of Lida, who with her mother, are the only members of the family now living in China. Jimmy, the American she loves, has gone back to America, and while she waits, a forgotten great singer trains Lida's lovely voice.

AND NEVER YIELD by Elinor Pryor is the story of Linsey who had unwillingly become a Mormon. But for the sake of a tall, dashing young man, she tried to become a true believer, struggled through the dark days in Far West, and later settled in the pleasant country of Nauvoo.

Puts Elephants Through Paces

* * * * *

ELEPHANT HERD TO BE ONE OF BIG ATTRACTIONS AT CIRCUS

The elephant herd, traditional favorite with circus-goers for many years, will be one of the principal attractions at the afternoon and evening performances to be presented at the Fairground on Thursday, June 11, when the Cole Brothers Circus appears in Mansfield.

Cole Brothers presents 24 huge elephants in three rings at the same time. For a climax they form a mount-column on the hippodrome track directly in front of the grandstands.

Alonzo Dever, master elephant trainer, has the entire herd under his personal direction during the performances, but they are put through their paces by three girls —Jean Allen, Helen Partello, and Marion Knowlton.

First glimpse of the elephants in the Cole Brothers show comes in the lavish spectacle which opens the performances. More than 1,000 persons comprise the personnel of the show this year. Among innovations this season are an enlarged big-top of indigo canvas, a double menagerie, and a horse show in a separate tent.

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Summer-time adventures on a houseboat and a mystery story for older girls are the stories of two new books which have been added to the childrens' shelves at Mansfield Public library.

HOUSEBOAT SUMMER, by Elizabeth Coatsworth — When Sandy and Bill went to visit their uncle and aunt for the summer they found that their home would be a houseboat on a quiet lake near an unexplored woods. The children could swim every day by diving from the front porch of the Ark, and there are countless picnics and boat rides in the book. One rainy day they made a map of the places on the shore that they had discovered.

ELBOW HOUSE, by Julia Carson—Penelope was left at home to care for two aged aunts, manage two older servants, and try to sell the family home during one eventful summer. A young artist rented the barn, and Penelope undertook home baking to increase her income. With the help of another young friend Penelope solved a mystery and discovered a treasure eliminating the problem of selling the house.

HOLIDAY WEEK-END RESULTS IN CROWDED COURT DOCKET

The Memorial Day week-end was blamed for a crowded municipal court docket yesterday when the cases of 13 persons involved in law violations over the holiday week-end were brought into court for settlement.

John Mahoney, 38, Galion, was fined $200 and costs with $150 being suspended pending the payment of damages to the owner of an automobile struck by Mahoney's car on U. S. Route 30-S near Ontario Sunday. Mahoney pleaded guilty when charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol and his operator's license was revoked for a year.

Karl Bonham, South Diamond street, was fined $100 and had his operator's license revoked for a year when he pleaded guilty to a similar charge. Police said Bonham stopped at a green light and started forward through an intersection when the traffic light turned red. Unfortunately for Bonham, a police cruiser was also waiting for the light to change and he was arrested immediately.

Ten persons were arraigned on intoxication charges and paid fines for forfeited bonds totalling $175.

Jessie H. Bowman, 72 East Sixth street, was fined $25 and costs after pleading guilty to an assault and battery charge filed by his wife, Dolly Bowman.

Ray Livingston, 117½ North Main street, was ordered to leave the city after a petit larceny charge was dismissed and he was given a suspended fine of $75 on an intoxication charge.

LISTS 'DON'TS' FOR SUMMER VACATIONISTS

Health Chief Tells What Not To Do on Travels in Areas Away From Home.

With the opening of the summer vacation season over, Mansfielders are starting to think in terms of summer resorts, mountains, lakes, trips and other vacation activity.

Dr. William B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, has compiled a list of "don'ts" for vacationists.

In his list, the health commissioner pointed out the many things to be avoided if you would enjoy your vacation. He has grouped them in swimming, eating, infection, sun-bathing and driving classes.

As for swimming, Dr. Wild has three warnings:

"Don't go in the water too soon after eating.

"Don't plunge into cold water when your body is overheated.

"Don't over-estimate your swimming ability. Avoid swimming alone.

"Don't forget to keep your eyes on the children all the time they are in the water.

"Don't take unnecessary chances by standing up in boats, rocking the boats, changing places or moving about in a small boat.

"Don't swim if you have an open cut on your body and don't swim in non-approved water that may contain typhoid or infantile paralysis germs."

Advice for eating includes:

"Don't drink water from sources not definitely known to be pure.

"Don't use milk, fruit, vegetables, ice or any food whose purity is not proven.

"Don't use perishable food not properly refrigerated."

Dr. Wild warns against too much sun in the following rules:

"Don't risk sunstroke by staying in the sun or by strenuous activity.

"Don't get sunburn by trying to get a "tan" too quickly.

"Don't invite heat exhaustion by over-activity by poor ventilation or unsuitable clothing."

Among other miscellaneous warnings given vacationists by Dr. Wild are the following: "Don't nibble grass blades which may carry germs, stay away from poison ivy and oak, don's walk through high grass because "chiggers" carry many germs, carefully treat all insect bites and avoid all snakes.

Last but not least, the health commissioner urged low speeds while driving not only to save tires and gasoline but lives.

Not only is it a gracious expression of gratitude to those who have sent floral tributes, but also courteously acknowledges the service and kindness of the many to whom a personal note of thanks cannot well be mailed, or whose names or addresses are not known.

A "Card of Thanks" can now be arranged by telephone. Dial 4251-6, ask for Miss Lane or Miss Stone, either will be glad to render whatever service and advice you need.

COMMERCIAL LOANS TAKE SHARP DROP

Repayment of Big Corporate Borrowings Believed Recession Cause.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Leading stocks moved up fractions in today's early market proceedings.

At a quiet opening improvement was registered for General Motors, American Telephone, Packard, Goodyear and Woolworth.

Market analysts studied the federal reserve compilation which disclosed another sharp drop in loans to commerce, industry and agriculture by member banks in 101 cities during the week ended last Wednesday. The latest recession in this barometer amounted to $56,000,000 and, as in those of prededing weeks, was attributed mainly to repayment of large corporate borrowings.

Notice was taken of the department of commerce figures estimating income received by individuals in April jumped 25 per cent over the like 1941 month and was at an annual rate of $109,000,000,000 compared with last year's total of $92,100,000,000

ROMMEL FORCE HIT BY SHELLS

Mechanized Units Bombarded as They Battle to Escape From Desert Trap.

has won a victory in the fierce five-day tank battle southwest of Tobruk.

(Kittyhawk fighters, Boston bombers and Wellingtons are blasting the gaps in the minefields through which Rommel is trying to withdraw his forces westward, he said. Gunfire and bomb explosions are being merged in a continual thunder.)

The fighting was intense as the Germans partly succeeded in running the gauntlet of the combined British fire and established a covering force of anti-tank guns to aid in the retreat of their armored units.

A great number of Axis tanks still were trapped east of the minefields, however, and were being subjected to severe attacks by the British.

Declares Rommel's Plans Go Awry

LONDON—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill in a commons statement on Libya said today the British had foreseen the drive launched by Nazi Marshal Erwin Rommel last week and were ready for it.

He said it was clear from captured documents that Rommel intended to defeat the British armored forces and capture Tobruk.

"It is clear we have every reason to be satisfied and more than satisfied with the course the battle so far has taken," the prime minister declared, "and we shall watch its further development with earnest attention.

"Fierce fighting still is proceeding and will go on, but whatever may be the result there is not a shadow of doubt that Rommel's plans for his initial offensive have gone completely awry and cost him dear in men and materiel.

"A conservative estimate gives the number of enemy tanks destroyed or captured as about 260. There is no doubt that the number of enemy transport vehicles destroyed or captured is very large."

"We have also had our losses," he continued. "It is inevitable in a battle of this kind that casualties on both sides in tanks should be high but our recovery organization is working very well."

Churchill read a statement by General Auchinleck emphasizing the "excellent performance" of American tanks with which, the general said, "all users are well pleased."

British sources estimated that 50 per cent or more of the Axis' armored formations in advanced areas of the Libyan battle have been destroyed by the British.

SHELBY PLANS SEWER SURVEY

Bond Issue Voted Several Years Ago Set Aside For Improvement.

SHELBY—City council has approved legislation for a survey of the downspouts in this city to find out whether they empty into the sanitary or storm sewers.

Council passed an ordinance Monday night determining to proceed with the survey which will be financed by a bond issue approved several years ago to improve the sewer system here.

The survey had been scheduled several years ago as a NYA project but was dropped with the curtailment of the NYA program.

Council also authorized Mayor W. R. Morris to hire extra patrolmen and firemen to take the place of the regular men during the vacation period. Before this year, the men doubled up their shifts and no extra men were hired.

A petition was received for street improvements for West Madison avenue. The city engineer will be instructed to draw up the estimates.

An ordinance determining to proceed with the sanitary sewer near Tucker avenue and Summit street was also approved.

Mayor Morris was authorized to lease a parking lot downtown on South Gamble street from A. M. Bourgeois for five years.

We like mixing "keeping cool" with "keep 'em flying."

If it's toughening steel for tank turrets — if it's broiling steaks to tender doneness — gas is the fuel to do the job. It takes the toughest steel to make Uncle Sam's tanks the most effective on the battle front. This steel armor plate must be heat treated at exacting temperatures to proper hardness.
The same gas that's on the job in America's tank factories, broils that steak in your gas range to proper doneness. That is important in the war effort, too. It takes healthy, well-nourished people to work and fight and win a war.
Steel and steaks —
